Ten Shillings "Fourth Printing November 1941"

The despatch of fourteen sheets in November 1941 is now disputed as evidence of a separate printing in view of the recent discovery of a note of cancellation in the Paper Issue book. It has been concluded that the despatch would have been a further supply from the May 1941 line perf. printing. However, the late return of the frame plate (November 13), the inconsistent wording of a letter from the Crown Agents to De La Rue (October 6) and the existence of this distinctive combination of gum, head and frame shades, leads us to suspect that some room for speculation on the exact attribution of the items below remains. The examples below all originate from the Robert Dickgiesser collection and formed part of the basis for the earlier listing. They are necessarily offered on their merits.

KING GEORGE VI KEYPLATE TYPE FLAWS & PRINTINGS

NON-CONSTANT FLAW -

THIS "DOUBLING" EFFECT IS A "BOUNCE PRINT" CAUSED BY THE CURLED PAPER TOUCHING THE INKED PLATE ON THE WAY DOWN. VERY SCARCE FLAW.

NORMAL EXAMPLE OF MARCH 1943 PRINTING. RAREST PRINTING OF ONLY 95 SHEETS.

CONSTANT HEAD PLATE FLAW. CUT ON CHIN FOUND ON POSITION #17 ON THE SHEET. LARGE AND SCARCE FLAW EXISTED LESS THAN TWO YEARS. 276 PRINTED ON THE 51.

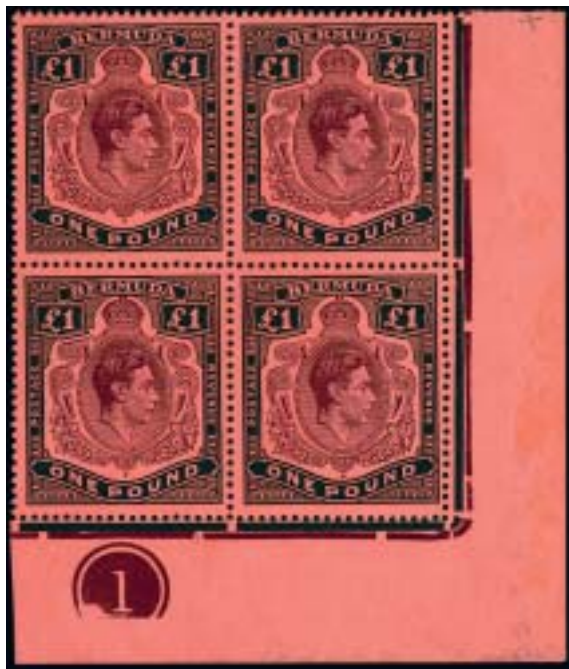

CONSTANT FRAME PLATE FLAW. EXISTS ON ONLY 5 VALUES AT POSITION 17 ON THE SHEET. ONE OF ONLY FIVE FRAME FLAWS KNOWN TO EXIST.

THIS COVER IS ONE OF THE RAREST KNOWN DUE TO THE MULTIPLE FLAWS OCCURRING ON A SCARCE PRINTING POSSIBLY UNIQUE ON COVER.

Possibly the largest known commercially used £1 block with 3^d value required for registration fee. The rate in use at date of postage (7th September 1946) was 1/6 per 1/2 oz and the parcel weight would have been 80 oz. It was despatched to Oslo, Norway. The keyplates were from the perf. 14 1945 printing.

On the 18th June 1947 a small number of covers were posted from Hamilton to Mr Karel Basika, a well known stamp dealer in Prague. At the time the lemon shade was not well known and has proved to be a rare shade. The number thirteen was probably the reference to the cover posted that day, however no more than 5 covers have been reported to date. According to Wilson Wong the stamp had no gum, as do all other 'Prague' cover examples.

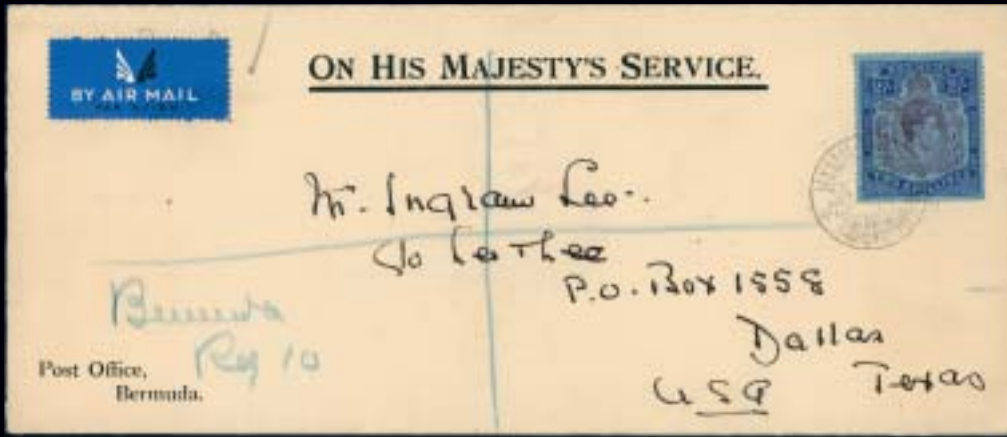

The second Prague cover confirms the unusual shade and gives weight to the theory propounded by Wilson Wong that someone had noted at that time the presence of a rare printing but on attempting to purchase further copies found them unavailable as most went for Fiscal use by airlines, shipping companies and travel agents. In order to profit from their rarity, one could only do so by altering other printings and therefore could only benefit by concealing the gum characteristics and affixing values to covers. Controversy still continues as to the authenticity of these covers.

"6735", backstamped June 23 arrival. Photo on page 85. Previously associated with the so-called "lemon" printing (listed by Bridger & Kay as CW 15bb), the "Prague" covers continue to attract attention and controversy. It has, for instance, been suggested that these are chemically induced forgeries yet the evidence for this may be otherwise interpreted. Chemical analysis would appear to have discounted the possibility of replacement of the original surface. With their inks compatible with the 1939 and 1940 despatches, it has been convincingly suggested that these stamps may have been printed on one or more sheets of non-chalk coated paper used among the paper supply for one or more of these early printings. As we see elsewhere in the variations found among the Key Plate issues, wartime demands created more pragmatic attitudes and perhaps on occasion a relaxation of standards. One theory notes that a supply of sheets from early printings sent in 1946 direct from the Treasury in Bermuda to the Customs & Excise Department for use mainly as a Poll Tax stamp may have included one or more such sheet. Some of this supply was then passed for fiscal use to Shipping companies and airlines, from one of which this usage has been said to originate. It is also possible that the shade first saw use on Poll Tax forms from where they were removed (Wilson Wong has noted that at least one of the stamps does not appear to have original gum). Although deliberate alteration of the ink shades has been discredited, we would suggest that it is possible that previous revenue usage may have necessitated some cleaning of the surface. On another side we note that a mint block of the shade is said to have been in the collection of Sir Lacon Threlford. It is assumed that up to around fifteen such covers bearing these shades may have been despatched, although fewer than this number have since been recorded. £3,500-£4,000
