PREFACE.

Two years ago, the Fourth Edition of the Postal Card Catalogue was published and has been sold. The author had hoped to publish a complete descriptive list before this, but the difficulties in the way have not all been overcome, and to meet the pressing demand for a catalogue of some kind this Fifth Edition has been prepared. It is not pretended that it is complete in every respect, and yet it is the best yet published; and, indeed, the only one worthy the name of a Postal Card Catalogue to be found in any language.

The author will be glad to have such errors and omissions as may be noted by collectors pointed out to him, and will also be thankful for any suggestions which may be offered to the end, that the complete work, when it does appear, will be a standard book of reference for all.

If this list proves to be a help to the increasing number of collectors of postal cards in the slightest degree, the time and trouble expended in its preparation will be amply compensated for.

L. W. DURBIN.

Philadelphia, April, 1882.

CATALOGUE OF POSTAL CARDS.

The prices given are for unused and entire cards.

The number before each refers to the variety as described in the Philatelic Monthly, Vols. 4, 5 and 6, excepting in those countries which have an asterisk prefixed, they having been especially arranged for this edition of the catalogue.

NOTICE.

L. W. DURBIN begs leave to call the attention of collectors to the fact of his being the only dealer in the United States who has made the subject of postal cards a study from the time of their first appearance. He has aimed to become familiar with all the minor varieties which have, from time to time, come to the notice of collectors in various parts of the world, and can assist the advanced collector more intelligently than any other dealer in this country and fully as well as any in Europe. New cards are received as early after their issue as it is possible to obtain them, while search is being constantly made in every quarter for old and rare varieties. In postal cards he is quite in advance of all competitors and intends to remain in that position.
