INTRODUCTION.

It seems such a simple every-day matter to attach a small bit of adhesive printed paper to a letter, to drop it into a box, to have it delivered with despatch at its address many miles away, that few persons ever inquire into the processes by which this is accomplished. That small bit of paper is, however, at once the monument of a great reform in the administration and policy of one branch of government, and at the same time one of the most potent agents of its success. For the Post Office is no modern institution; it has both an ancient and a modern history. From being, under the old system, a luxury cumbersome, expensive, and almost worthless, under the new it has become an every-day comfort and necessity, active, economic, and full of civilizing force. Modern research has discovered suggestions of cheap postage and the postage stamp, even traces of their employment by individual enterprise, long prior to the adoption of the system by the English government; yet they have always gone hand in hand. The true history of the new era, beginning with the appearance of Rowland Hill's pamphlet in 1837, follows the subsequent discussion of the subject of Cheap Postage and Postal Reform by the press and public of England, to the final inauguration of the new system in January, 1840, and its rapid spread since then over the civilized world.

This history has, however, received little attention, and must be gathered mostly from scattered minutes in governmental records and occasional articles in the periodic press. That would be an interesting and profitable investigation which should not only trace the influence on the commerce and history of the world, but estimate also the effect on its civilization and private life, of a system which sends no unwelcome messengers from counting-house to counting-house, from home to home, and even into the most private escritoire of the maiden. Indeed, circumstances connected with a love-letter are said to have set in motion the agitation which resulted in the adoption of the new system.

The collection of Postage Stamps has done no small service in preserving many interesting details of this history, and a well-arranged collection furnishes, perhaps, its best illustration. How or when stamp collecting began cannot now be very satisfactorily settled. Probably many of the earlier stamps were already obsolete before they became members of the first collection. Individuals had long collected before collecting became popular. We next hear of it as the mania of the day. Occasional articles, some satirizing it, others commending it, some even attempting to tell something about it, begin to appear in the public press. The end of 1862 furnished the first magazine entirely devoted to the subject. Then began to appear numerous magazines, illustrated and systematic manuals, priced catalogues, carefully prepared monographs, elaborately designed albums, a host of advertising circulars. These contain, together with matters relating to stamp collecting, much valuable history, not only of stamps, of their employment, and of the processes of their manufacture, but also of the Post Office itself; have better informed collectors, and more seriously attached them to the pursuit which has taken to itself the name of Philately, and claims to rank with Numismatics as a branch of historical and antiquarian study.

Thus has grown up a literature, at least curious if not important. Much of it is very crude and transitory, some of it even scurrilous. Several lists have appeared attempting to catalogue it in the Stamp Magazines: "The Stamp Collector's Monthly Gazette," 1867, "The Philatelist," 1867, 1869, and 1872, "The American Coin and Stamp Review," 1871, "The American Journal of Philately," 1871, "Deutsche Briefmarken Zeitung," 1871, and "Moschkau's Magazine," 1872. None of them, however, give the titles in full. Circulars addressed to such persons as were thought to possess further information about the subject brought many kind answers, and many of the works themselves. Some were returned "not found" by the Post Office. It is to be regretted that none sent to Germany were ever answered. From others was gathered the very unsatisfactory information that even the larger dealers and publishers have kept no files or even memoranda of their publications. Many of the magazines have been edited by mere boys. Most of the catalogues were priced, and, indeed, the trade in stamps has been the fruitful source of the larger number of these works. There are not wanting, however, works of much literary pretension and merit, some of them very elaborately and expensively illustrated.

Having, in the course of some fifteen years' pursuit of stamp collecting as a recreation, accumulated many of these works, from these, and the materials above mentioned, the original manuscript of the present work was originally compiled for private use. The numerous requests for copies thereof, or information therefrom, received since a copy was furnished the Boston Public Library at the request of the Librarian, have induced its revision and its present printing, under the title of "The Philatelical Library." From the nature of the task it is hardly possible that it will be found complete or free from errors.

The endeavor has been to catalogue alphabetically, by the names of the authors or publishers and by the countries and languages in which they were published, all works designed, in whole or part, for stamp collectors. This division includes American, Danish, Dutch, English, French, German, Italian, and Spanish publications. The full title, the names of the author, printer, and publisher, when known, the months and numbers of each magazine, the number and size of the pages, and the place and date of publication of each work, are given. Explanatory notes have been added. Since the abolition of the paper duty, and the manufacture of paper by machinery, the terms folio, quarto, octavo, &c., do not give any adequate idea of the real size of a book; the size of the pages is therefore given in inches. The titles are copied with their original abbreviations and punctuation. All words printed or begun with capitals in the originals are commenced with a capital letter. For the variations that may have occurred the compiler and not his printer is responsible. As all the works were not at hand, such as are not in our collection are indicated, those we have not seen, by a star (*), those we have seen but do not possess, by the double dagger (‡), or such information is conveyed by the note. Every page not so marked may be understood to be in our possession. Blank spaces have uniformly been left for such details as we could not furnish.

In the second part are enumerated the less important Price or Packet Lists, Circulars, Advertisements, &c. Though far from complete, it is inserted to give an idea of the extent of the business of stamp selling. The third part consists of references to works and articles in periodicals and newspapers, relating to Stamp Collecting, the History of Stamps, the History of Postal Reform and Cheap Postage, the History of the Post Office, Postal Guides and Periodicals, Postage Stamp Games, Music, and Photographs.

It is hoped that the Library may prove a welcome guide to collectors of stamp literature, and may not be without historical interest to those interested in curious publications or the history of postal matters.

Note. — Nos. 393–397 give the changes in the title of the catalogue issued by this firm. Messrs. Young & Stockall inform me, "We commenced business as stamp dealers in July, 1862, when we issued a large priced catalogue, in two sheets, describing about one thousand varieties, which we retained, with alterations, until the early part of 1864, when we commenced to issue catalogues in their present form. In June, 1865, we commenced to issue them monthly, down to December, 1867. We then issued them every other month, till December, 1869, since which time we have issued them irregularly: having two thousand five hundred printed at a time, and add new issues from time to time, in a "Supplementary List." When we use up the issue, we have a copy thoroughly revised, &c., and a new batch printed." They also note the following as issued: —

B. Large paper ed., („ „ „ „ 6×9.) „ „

Colored paper covers. Title-page.

Note. — (Nos. 443–449.) I have catalogued only two editions and supplement of Moens's "Manuel." In the "Timbre Poste" there are advertised four editions, viz.:

Manuel du Collectionneur, etc., en 18o green paper (No. 443).
„ „ „ „ 2e édition en 12o (No. 444).
„ „ „ „ supplément de la 2e édition en 12o (No. 445).
„ „ „ „ 3e édition en 12o., 1863 ( ).
„ „ „ „ 4e „ „ 18o., green paper.

Though the last is repeated in several numbers of the "Timbre Poste," it seems to be a mistake for the first edition. Les Illustrations advertise the third edition as to have references to the plates. Moens writes that the third edition is the second and supplement bound together, and the fourth is the text of the Illustrations. I have, therefore, omitted the third and fourth editions. The illustrations are advertised as,

Les Illustrations, etc., Plates in 12 Nos. (No. 446).
Les Timbres Illustrés „ „ 17 „ („ 447).
Les Timbres Poste Illustrés, Text of Les Illustrations (No. 448).
„ „ „ „ Text & Plates, 2e edition (No. 449).
„ „ „ „ „ „ „ large edition (No. 449).
Postage Stamps Illustrated, „ „ „ English edition (No. 301).
„ „ „ „ „ „ same, Stafford Smith, & Co. (No. 302).
„ „ „ Text of Les Illustrations, English (No. 301).

Of these, I have not been able to ascertain whether the French text was in reality issued separately or not, though the English, which I have not noted, was. All the others I have seen and noted, though none are marked second edition.

INTRODUCTION.

It seems such a simple every-day matter to attach a small bit of adhesive printed paper to a letter, to drop it into a box, to have it delivered with despatch at its address many miles away, that few persons ever inquire into the processes by which this is accomplished. That small bit of paper is, however, at once the monument of a great reform in the administration and policy of one branch of government, and at the same time one of the most potent agents of its success. For the Post Office is no modern institution; it has both an ancient and a modern history. From being, under the old system, a luxury cumbersome, expensive, and almost worthless, under the new it has become an every-day comfort and necessity, active, economic, and full of civilizing force. Modern research has discovered suggestions of cheap postage and the postage stamp, even traces of their employment by individual enterprise, long prior to the adoption of the system by the English government; yet they have always gone hand in hand. The true history of the new era, beginning with the appearance of Rowland Hill's pamphlet in 1837, follows the subsequent discussion of the subject of Cheap Postage and Postal Reform by the press and public of England, to the final inauguration of the new system in January, 1840, and its rapid spread since then over the civilized world.

This history has, however, received little attention, and must be gathered mostly from scattered minutes in governmental records and occasional articles in the periodic press. That would be an interesting and profitable investigation which should not only trace the influence on the commerce and history of the world, but estimate also the effect on its civilization and private life, of a system which sends no unwelcome messengers from counting-house to counting-house, from home to home, and even into the most private escritoire of the maiden. Indeed, circumstances connected with a love-letter are said to have set in motion the agitation which resulted in the adoption of the new system.

The collection of Postage Stamps has done no small service in preserving many interesting details of this history, and a well-arranged collection furnishes, perhaps, its best illustration. How or when stamp collecting began cannot now be very satisfactorily settled. Probably many of the earlier stamps were already obsolete before they became members of the first collection. Individuals had long collected before collecting became popular. We next hear of it as the mania of the day. Occasional articles, some satirizing it, others commending it, some even attempting to tell something about it, begin to appear in the public press. The end of 1862 furnished the first magazine entirely devoted to the subject. Then began to appear numerous magazines, illustrated and systematic manuals, priced catalogues, carefully prepared monographs, elaborately designed albums, a host of advertising circulars. These contain, together with matters relating to stamp collecting, much valuable history, not only of stamps, of their employment, and of the processes of their manufacture, but also of the Post Office itself; have better informed collectors, and more seriously attached them to the pursuit which has taken to itself the name of Philately, and claims to rank with Numismatics as a branch of historical and antiquarian study.

Thus has grown up a literature, at least curious if not important. Much of it is very crude and transitory, some of it even scurrilous. Several lists have appeared attempting to catalogue it in the Stamp Magazines: "The Stamp Collector's Monthly Gazette," 1867, "The Philatelist," 1867, 1869, and 1872, "The American Coin and Stamp Review," 1871, "The American Journal of Philately," 1871, "Deutsche Briefmarken Zeitung," 1871, and "Moschkau's Magazine," 1872. None of them, however, give the titles in full. Circulars addressed to such persons as were thought to possess further information about the subject brought many kind answers, and many of the works themselves. Some were returned "not found" by the Post Office. It is to be regretted that none sent to Germany were ever answered. From others was gathered the very unsatisfactory information that even the larger dealers and publishers have kept no files or even memoranda of their publications. Many of the magazines have been edited by mere boys. Most of the catalogues were priced, and, indeed, the trade in stamps has been the fruitful source of the larger number of these works. There are not wanting, however, works of much literary pretension and merit, some of them very elaborately and expensively illustrated.

Having, in the course of some fifteen years' pursuit of stamp collecting as a recreation, accumulated many of these works, from these, and the materials above mentioned, the original manuscript of the present work was originally compiled for private use. The numerous requests for copies thereof, or information therefrom, received since a copy was furnished the Boston Public Library at the request of the Librarian, have induced its revision and its present printing, under the title of "The Philatelical Library." From the nature of the task it is hardly possible that it will be found complete or free from errors.

The endeavor has been to catalogue alphabetically, by the names of the authors or publishers and by the countries and languages in which they were published, all works designed, in whole or part, for stamp collectors. This division includes American, Danish, Dutch, English, French, German, Italian, and Spanish publications. The full title, the names of the author, printer, and publisher, when known, the months and numbers of each magazine, the number and size of the pages, and the place and date of publication of each work, are given. Explanatory notes have been added. Since the abolition of the paper duty, and the manufacture of paper by machinery, the terms folio, quarto, octavo, &c., do not give any adequate idea of the real size of a book; the size of the pages is therefore given in inches. The titles are copied with their original abbreviations and punctuation. All words printed or begun with capitals in the originals are commenced with a capital letter. For the variations that may have occurred the compiler and not his printer is responsible. As all the works were not at hand, such as are not in our collection are indicated, those we have not seen, by a star (*), those we have seen but do not possess, by the double dagger (‡), or such information is conveyed by the note. Every page not so marked may be understood to be in our possession. Blank spaces have uniformly been left for such details as we could not furnish.

In the second part are enumerated the less important Price or Packet Lists, Circulars, Advertisements, &c. Though far from complete, it is inserted to give an idea of the extent of the business of stamp selling. The third part consists of references to works and articles in periodicals and newspapers, relating to Stamp Collecting, the History of Stamps, the History of Postal Reform and Cheap Postage, the History of the Post Office, Postal Guides and Periodicals, Postage Stamp Games, Music, and Photographs.

It is hoped that the Library may prove a welcome guide to collectors of stamp literature, and may not be without historical interest to those interested in curious publications or the history of postal matters.

Note.—Nos. 393–397 give the changes in the title of the catalogue issued by this firm. Messrs. Young & Stockall inform me, "We commenced business as stamp dealers in July, 1862, when we issued a large priced catalogue, in two sheets, describing about one thousand varieties, which we retained, with alterations, until the early part of 1864, when we commenced to issue catalogues in their present form. In June, 1865, we commenced to issue them monthly, down to December, 1867. We then issued them every other month, till December, 1869, since which time we have issued them irregularly: having two thousand five hundred printed at a time, and add new issues from time to time, in a "Supplementary List." When we use up the issue, we have a copy thoroughly revised, &c., and a new batch printed." They also note the following as issued:—

B. Large paper ed., („ „ „ „ 6×9.) „ „

Colored paper covers. Title-page.

Note. — (Nos. 443–449.) I have catalogued only two editions and supplement of Moens's "Manuel." In the "Timbre Poste" there are advertised four editions, viz.:

Manuel du Collectionneur, etc., en 18o green paper (No. 443).
„ „ „ „ 2e édition en 12o (No. 444).
„ „ „ „ supplément de la 2e édition en 12o (No. 445).
„ „ „ „ 3e édition en 12o., 1863 ( ).
„ „ „ „ 4e „ „ 18o., green paper.

Though the last is repeated in several numbers of the "Timbre Poste," it seems to be a mistake for the first edition. Les Illustrations advertise the third edition as to have references to the plates. Moens writes that the third edition is the second and supplement bound together, and the fourth is the text of the Illustrations. I have, therefore, omitted the third and fourth editions. The illustrations are advertised as,

Les Illustrations, etc., Plates in 12 Nos. (No. 446).
Les Timbres Illustrés „ „ 17 „ („ 447).
Les Timbres Poste Illustrés, Text of Les Illustrations (No. 448).
„ „ „ „ Text & Plates, 2e edition (No. 449).
„ „ „ „ „ „ „ large edition (No. 449).
Postage Stamps Illustrated, „ „ „ English edition (No. 301).
„ „ „ „ „ „ same, Stafford Smith, & Co. (No. 302)..
„ „ „ Text of Les Illustrations, English (No. 301).

Of these, I have not been able to ascertain whether the French text was in reality issued separately or not, though the English, which I have not noted, was. All the others I have seen and noted, though none are marked second edition.

INTRODUCTION.

It seems such a simple every-day matter to attach a small bit of adhesive printed paper to a letter, to drop it into a box, to have it delivered with despatch at its address many miles away, that few persons ever inquire into the processes by which this is accomplished. That small bit of paper is, however, at once the monument of a great reform in the administration and policy of one branch of government, and at the same time one of the most potent agents of its success. For the post-office is no modern institution; it has both an ancient and a modern history. From being, under the old system, a luxury cumbersome, expensive, and almost worthless, under the new it has become an every-day comfort and necessity, active, economic, and full of civilizing force. Modern research has discovered suggestions of cheap postage and the postage stamp, even traces of their employment by individual enterprise, long prior to the adoption of the system by the English government; yet they have always gone hand in hand. The true history of the new era begins with the appearance of Rowland Hill's pamphlet in 1837, the subsequent discussion of the subject of Cheap Postage and Postal Reform by the press and public of England, and the final inauguration of the new system in January, 1840. Since then it has spread rapidly over the civilized world.

The history of the modern system has, however, received little attention, and must be gathered mostly from scattered minutes in governmental records and occasional articles in the periodic press. That would be an interesting and profitable investigation which should follow not only its influence on the commerce and history of the world, but estimate also the influence on civilization and private life of a system which sends no unwelcome messengers from counting-house to counting-house, from home to home, and even into the most private escritoire of the maiden. Indeed, circumstances connected with a love-letter are said to have set in motion the agitation which resulted in the new system.

The collection of Postage Stamps has done no small service in preserving many interesting details of this history, and a well-arranged collection furnishes, perhaps, its best illustration. How or when stamp collecting began cannot now be very satisfactorily settled. Probably many of the earlier stamps were already obsolete before they became members of the first collection. Individuals had long collected before collecting became popular. We next hear of it as the mania of the day. Occasional articles, some satirizing it, others commending it, some even attempting to tell something about it, begin to appear in the public press. The end of 1862 furnished the first magazine entirely devoted to the subject. Then began to appear numerous magazines, illustrated and systematic manuals, priced catalogues, carefully prepared monographs, elaborately designed albums, a host of advertising circulars. These contain much valuable history, not only of the stamps themselves, and their employment, processes of manufacture, and the extent of their use and matter relating to their collection, but also of the Post Office itself. These have better informed collectors, and more seriously attached them to the pursuit which has taken to itself the name of Philately, and claims to rank with numismatics as a branch of historical and antiquarian study.

Thus has grown up a literature, at least curious if not important. Much of it is very crude and transitory, some of it even scurrilous. Several lists have appeared attempting to catalogue it in the Stamp Magazines: "The Stamp Collector's Monthly Gazette," 1867, "The Philatelist," 1867, 1869, and 1872, "The American Coin and Stamp Review," 1871, "The American Journal of Philately," 1871, "Deutsche Briefmarken Zeitung," 1871, and "Moschkau's Magazine," 1872. None of them, however, gives the title in full. A circular addressed to such persons as were thought to possess further information about the subject brought many kind answers, and many of the works themselves. Some were returned "not found" by the Post Office. It is to be regretted that none sent to Germany were ever answered. From others was gathered the very unsatisfactory information that even the larger dealers and publishers have kept no files or even memoranda of their publications. Many of the magazines have been edited by mere boys. Most of the catalogues were priced, and, indeed, the trade in stamps has been the fruitful source of the larger number of these works. There are not wanting, however, works of much literary pretension and merit, some of them very elaborately and expensively illustrated.

Having in the course of some fifteen years' pursuit of stamp collecting as a recreation accumulated many of these works, from these and the materials above mentioned the original manuscript of the present work was originally compiled for private use. The numerous requests for copies thereof, or information therefrom, received since a copy was furnished the Boston Public Library at the request of the Librarian, have induced its revision and its present printing, under the title of "The Philatelical Library." From the nature of the task it is hardly possible that it will be found complete or free from errors.

The endeavor has been to catalogue alphabetically, by the names of the authors or publishers and by the countries and languages in which they were published, all works designed for stamp collectors, in whole or part. This division includes American, Danish, Dutch, English, French, German, Italian, and Spanish publications. The full title, the names of the author, printer, and publisher, when known, the months and numbers of each magazine, the number and size of the pages, and the place and date of publication of each work, are given. Explanatory notes have been added. Since the abolition of the paper duty, and the manufacture of paper by machinery, the terms folio, quarto, octavo, &c., do not give any adequate idea of the real size of a book; the size of the pages is therefore given in inches. The titles are copied with their original abbreviations and punctuation. All words printed or begun with capitals in the originals are commenced with a capital letter. For the variations that may have occurred the compiler and not his printer is responsible. As all the works were not at hand, such as are not in our collection are indicated, those we have not seen, by a star (*), those we have seen but do not possess, by the double dagger (‡), or such information is conveyed by the note. Every page not so marked may be understood to be in our possession. Blank spaces have uniformly been left for such details as we could not furnish.

In the second part are enumerated the less important price or packet list circulars, advertisements, &c. Though far from complete, it is inserted to give an idea of the extent of the business of stamp selling. The third part consists of references to works and articles in the periodicals and newspapers relating to Stamp Collecting, the History of Stamps, the History of Postal Reform and Cheap Postage, the History of the Post Office, Postal Guides and Periodicals, Postage Stamp Games, Music, and Photographs.

It is hoped that the Library may prove a welcome guide to collectors of stamp literature, and may not be without historical interest to those interested in curious publications or the history of postal matters.

St. Louis, July 4, 1874.

In June, 1865, we commenced to issue them monthly, down to December, 1867. We then issued them every other month, till December, 1869, since which time we have issued them irregularly: having two thousand five hundred printed at a time, and add new issues from time to time, in a supplementary list. When we use up the issue, we have a copy thoroughly revised, &c., and a new batch printed." They also note the following as issued:—

Colored paper covers. Title-page.

Note. — (Nos. 443-449.) I have catalogued only two editions and supplement of Moens's "Manuel." In the Timbre Poste there are advertised four editions, viz.:

Manuel du Collectionneur, etc., en 18o green paper (No. 443).
„ „ „ „ 2e édition en 12o (No. 444).
„ „ „ „ supplément de la 2e édition en 12o (No. 445).
„ „ „ „ 3e édition en 12o., 1863 ( ).
„ „ „ „ 4e „ „ 18o., green paper.

Though the last is repeated in several numbers of the Timbre Poste, it seems to be a mistake for the first edition. Les Illustrations advertise the third edition as to have references to the plates. Moens writes that the third edition is the second and supplement bound together, and the fourth is the text of the Illustrations. I have, therefore, omitted the third and fourth editions. The illustrations are advertised as,

Les Illustrations, etc., Plates in 12 Nos. (No. 446).
Les Timbres Illustrés „ „ 17 „ („ 447).
Les Timbres Poste Illustrés, Texte of Les Illustrations (No. 448)
„ „ „ „ Texte & Plates, 2e edition (No. 449).
„ „ „ „ „ „ „ large edition (No. 449).
Postage Stamps Illustrated, „ „ „ English edition (No. 301).
„ „ „ „ „ „ same, Stafford Smith, & Co. (No. 302).
„ „ „ Texte of les Illustrations, English (No. 301).

Of these, I have not been able to ascertain whether the French text was in reality issued separately or not, ~~and have never seen the edition bearing the imprint of Stafford Smith~~. All the others I have seen and noted, though none are marked second edition.

Though the English, which I have not noted, was.

This is mentioned in the List of Stamp Publications of the "American Coin and Stamp Review," August, 1871. It was first mentioned by S. A. The copy sent me is certainly not a stamp paper.

In June, 1865, we commenced to issue them monthly, down to December, 1867. We then issued them every other month, till December, 1869, since which time we have issued them irregularly: having two thousand five hundred printed at a time, and add new issues from time to time, in a "Supplementary List." B. Large paper ed., („ „ „ „ 6×9.) „ „

Colored paper covers. Title-page.

Note. — (Nos. 443–449.) I have catalogued only two editions and supplement of Moens's "Manuel." In the Timbre Poste there are advertised four editions, viz.:

Manuel du Collectionneur, etc., en 18o green paper (No. 443).
„ „ „ „ 2e édition en 12o (No. 444).
„ „ „ „ supplément de la 2e édition en 12o (No. 445).
„ „ „ „ 3e édition en 12o., 1863 ( ).
„ „ „ „ 4e „ „ 18o., green paper.

Though the last is repeated in several numbers of the Timbre Poste, it seems to be a mistake for the first edition. Les Illustrations advertise the third edition as to have references to the plates. Moens writes that the third edition is the second and supplement bound together, and the fourth is the text of the Illustrations. I have, therefore, omitted the third and fourth editions. The illustrations are advertised as,

Les Illustrations, etc., Plates in 12 Nos. (No. 446).
Les Timbres Illustrés „ „ 17 „ („ 447).
Les Timbres Poste Illustrés, Text of Les Illustrations (No. 448).
„ „ „ „ Text & Plates, 2e edition (No. 449).
„ „ „ „ „ „ „ large edition (No. 449).
Postage Stamps Illustrated, „ „ „ English edition (No. 301).
„ „ „ „ „ „ same, Stafford Smith, & Co. (No. 302).
„ „ „ Text of les Illustrations, English (No. 301).

Of these, I have not been able to ascertain whether the French text was in reality issued separately or not, though the English, which I have not noted, was. All the others I have seen and noted, though none are marked second edition.
