NOTICE.

A PRIZE OF $1.00.

Together with a Yearly Subscription to the EXCHANGE AND MART is given every week for the

BEST SHORT STORY

Not to exceed 2 columns in length, Which will be published every Saturday, and the money forwarded on Mail day.

CONDITIONS.

Competitions must be sent so as to arrive at the Boston Office not later than Monday noon in each week. Any arriving after that time will be placed in the following week's competition.

Written competitions must be on one side of the paper only, and on paper not wider than note sheet. Printed matter may be sent, and is equally eligible.

The manager reserves the right to publish any competition, whether it gains the prize or not.

If original a prize of $1 and subscription is given; if taken from a periodical or magazine, which must be of a date previous to 1884, its name must be given, the prize being a subscription for one year only.

Competitors are not confined to one, but may send any number of competitions, which should have "Prize Competition" on the envelopes.

The correct name and address of the sender must be distinctly written upon every competition, for publication in the event of success. Any neglect of this condition will disqualify the piece sent in.

It is particularly requested that no money orders, stamps, or money at all, be enclosed in the Prize Competitions. These must be sent separately.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.

ADDRESS.

METHOD.—A person wishing to buy, sell or exchange, through our columns, must send the advertisement, clearly written on a separate piece of paper, according to the rules, to the Manager of THE EXCHANGE AND MART, 17 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

RATES.

Bargains under 30 words in length will be inserted free in the Private Columns; over that, all cent each word, according to the discretion of the Editor, as these columns are not intended for those whose business it is to dispose of the goods they advertise.

TRADE ADVERTISING.—For displayed advertisements the rate is 8 1-3 cents a line, twelve lines to the inch. No extra charge for cuts, &c. Trade advertisements can only be inserted in private columns at trade price, one cent a word.

SUBSCRIBERS.—$1.00 a year, post-paid; 6 months, 50 cts; 3 months, 35 cents. We shall be obliged if subscribers will mark against their names, "Subscriber," when forwarding advertisements.

INSERTION.

The preference is invariably given to subscribers' advertisements, unless they are paid for at the rate of one half ct. each word, in which case they will be inserted in the two next issues.

Free advertisements are inserted, as far as possible, in the order in which they are received; but we do not guarantee their insertion, and should recommend their being booked, if important.

Ads. intended for a particular issue must be at the Head Office 10 days in advance.

PRIVATE NUMBER INSTEAD OF ADDRESS.—If the advertiser wish his own name and address to be published, it can be done; but supposing he should wish to keep them private by intimating this to us, we will attach a number to his advertisement in place of them, the cost of which is two cents extra; and all letters answering his advertisement will therefore be addressed, under cover, to that number at our office, to be forwarded by us to him.

BOOKING.

Advertisements can be booked to appear in any two desired issues, by the payment of one half ct. each word; but if not to appear in consecutive issues, two cents extra must be paid. Advertisements must be plainly marked at the bottom, "2 cents, Book, Sept. 2;" or, whatever the date may be.

REPEATING.—Any number of insertions may be ordered at one time, and only one copy of the advertisement will then be required; but if it is wished to repeat an advertisement that has already been published, a copy of it must be sent, as if it were a fresh advertisement. The price for repeating advertisements is, in all cases, the same as that of the first insertion.

REMITTANCES.—We should feel much obliged if our advertisers would, whenever possible, pay for their advertisements, &c., by Postal Notes, Money Orders or Cash, instead of by stamps. We do not make this a rule, but ask it as a favor. If Money Orders are used they should be drawn on Post-Office Boston, Mass., in favor of Percival Gassett. When stamps are sent we prefer two-cent ones.

ANSWERING.

NUMBERED ADVERTISEMENTS.—When replying to advertisements to which numbers are attached, the number must be clearly written in the top right hand corner of an envelope, thus:

and enclosed, together with a two-cent stamp for each letter to be forwarded, in another envelope addressed to the Manager of THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART, Boston, Mass., who will add the right names and addresses, and post the inclosures, thus bringing buyer and seller into communication. STAMPS NOT TO BE AFFIXED.—The stamps for postage must on no account be affixed to the reply, nor may embossed stamps be used.

POST CARDS.—We cannot undertake to forward these.

NO REPLY.—When there is no reply in answer to an application, it is understood that the offer made is not acceptable, or that the article has been already disposed of.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The Manager reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

SAFEGUARDS.

When strangers are dealing together, it can always be arranged with the express company that the purchase money is to be collected on delivery of the goods.

We cannot too earnestly warn our readers against trusting strangers, until they have satisfactorily proved their good faith. Drafts, and promissory notes should never be accepted; and if references are offered, they should be inquired into before any thing else is done.

APPROVAL.—Goods can be ordered on approval, but their value should be first deposited with our agent, Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street, Boston, for whom we are responsible. He acknowledges receipt to both parties, and holds the money until satisfied that either the goods are returned, or a sale effected; then, after deducting cost of postage, money order, etc., will forward to the right person.

Carriage is payable by the buyer; and if returned, each pay one way.

Form for forwarding money on deposit:—Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street: Sir, I beg leave to deposit $..... with you, as value of..... to be forwarded me by Mr..... (give full address). Yours truly, Name Address.....

RULES FOR TRANSACTIONS.

TRUSTING.—Do not send money or goods to strangers without security. It is obvious that we cannot guarantee the integrity of all who use our columns, although we take every precaution.

POST CARDS.—These may be used for answering advertisements when the address is published, but not otherwise.

CORRESPONDENCE.—A stamped addressed envelope must be sent with any letter requiring an answer from us by post.

GOODS IN TRANSIT.—These are at the seller's risk, i.e., any damage to or loss of an article on its journey, is borne by the vendor or exchanger; but a rejected article must be properly packed and returned by the same means as was used in sending it.

CARRIAGE.—Unless there is a stipulation to the contrary, the carriage of all goods (except such as are sent by post) is payable by the buyer. If an article sent on approval be returned, each party must pay carriage one way, unless otherwise agreed.

APPROVAL.—Unless there is an agreement to the contrary, articles received on approval must not be kept more than three clear days. When arranging a purchase, the right to return the article, should it be disapproved, should always be insisted on.

EXCHANGE.—An exchange is not complete until both parties are satisfied. We recommend that all goods be ordered on "approval."

DISPUTES.—If an article be ordered without any mention being made as to its being sent upon "approval," the purchase is complete and binding, unless the purchaser can show that the description given was obviously incorrect, either by omission or commission, in which case the bargain may be repudiated; but if the seller maintain that the description was correct, the article itself, and all letters relating to it, must be sent to us for our judgment, and the person against whom we decide must pay all expenses of carriage to and from us. The only exceptions are bulky articles and live stock. In these cases, the articles must be returned to the seller, each party paying carriage one way.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The manager does not guarantee the insertion of any advertisement, and reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

Only one class of articles may be offered in each advertisement. Articles of dress (with the exception of furs, feathers, artificial flowers, Indian shawls, scarves, and uniforms), must be new; i. e., never worn and specified as such in the advertisement.

The advertiser's full name and address must be at all times given for the editor's use.

CARRIAGE BY MAIL.

Merchandise in the form of a parcel can be mailed, but must not exceed 4 pounds in weight, the rate being one cent an ounce any distance. The ends must be left open, that the contents can be easily ascertained. No writing can be enclosed. This is preferable for out of the way places to express, but more expensive.

Books and printed matter can be mailed at the rate of 2 ounces for one cent, not exceeding 4 pounds in weight. No limit in weight for a single book.

Dear Sir,—Please discontinue my notice of Coin Detector. I have made a sale very quickly through your paper. Within twenty-four hours after receiving it, I had sold the article mentioned.

Yours respectfully, F. K. RISING.

ROCK ISLAND, ILL., March 20, 1886.

EDITOR AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir,—Thanks to your paper, we have disposed of several articles through its columns, and have exchanged with several others. Please insert the enclosed; again wishing you the greatest success, we remain,

Yours truly, ILLINOIS PHILATELIST. Box 836.

PEMBERTON, N. J., March 11, 1886.

MANAGER OF EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir,—I take your paper and have put one exchange in it from which I got good results. I would like to put in another one in your next number.

Yours truly, BENJ. P. THOMAS.

MARCH 10, 1886.

AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir:—I had no trouble in selling my printing press, please take the advertisement out. Yours, G. H. SIMONDS, P. O. Box 136. Maysville Ky

WINCHESTER, IND., Mar. 15, 1886.

AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir,—In answer to my advertisement for the sale of canaries, many orders have been received; some from as far East as Maine, some from Mississippi, which is sufficient evidence of the large circulation of your paper.

E. F. MORRISON.

ELLENVILLE, N. Y.

To EDITOR OF THE EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir, — I have received a large number of answers to my advertisement in a late issue of EXCHANGE AND MART from all parts of the U. S. I think it is an excellent medium, and shall advise everybody I know to send on their subscriptions. You can use this if you wish. Yours truly,

L. F. COONS.

Box 231, COLUMBUS, O., March 3, 1886.

EDITOR EXCHANGE AND MART:

Kind Sir, — Have made a very satisfactory exchange of the printing press, etc., advertised in your columns away out in Tennessee, which shows the value of your paper as an advertising medium. Success to you, gentlemen.

Very respectfully, G. L. MORRIS.

BURLINGTON, VT., Feb. 26, 1886.

Dear Sir, — I have been so busy for the past few days that I have not had time to write you that the cornet which I advertised for sale in THE EXCHANGE AND MART, "M 14," has been sold; for which I have to thank you.

Respectfully yours,

JAMES BUCKHAM.
Editor Daily Free Press

CARTHAGE, IND., Feb. 27, 1886.

MANAGER OF EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir, — Thanks to your paper, I have made an exchange and got a copy of the "Life of U. S. Grant." Yours very respectfully.

HORACE W. LINEBACK.

EDITOR EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir, — I have just completed a satisfactory exchange with Mrs. E. Hiffe of New York city, who noticed my advertisement in your paper. This is the third exchange I have made. Remaining yours respectfully,

A. N. HANSON.

E. Somerville, Mass.

EDITOR EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir, — I have made many good exchanges through your valuable paper for which accept thanks. I send you two more which I hope to see in the next number.

EDITOR OF EXCHANGE AND MART.

Dear Sir: — I sold the printing press I advertised with you easily, etc.

E. E. YOUNG.

23½ Hudson St., Boston, Mass.

DANVERS, MASS., Feb. 17, 1886.

EXCHANGE AND MART:

I have received answers from as far west as St. Paul, Minn., and Lima, Ohio. This makes manifest the fact that your paper, in circulation, covers a large area.

Truly, F. E. MOYNAHAN.

TAUNTON, MASS, Feb. 20, 1886.

Dear Sir, — I have received a number of answers to my "advertisements" and find the EXCHANGE AND MART a splendid advertising medium.

Yours truly,

Box 93. CHAS. L. BARNARD.

MANAGER OF EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir, — Through your paper I have made some good exchanges, one reaching way out in Illinois, and I consider it fills a field that no other journal ever has.

Yours truly,

Reading, Pa.

EDITOR OF EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir, — I admire your paper, and have already had much more than my subscription from it, with perfect satisfaction to all concerned, etc.

S. JACOB.

Bellevue Avenue, Newport, R. I.

DANVERS, Mass., Feb. 16, 1886.

Dear Sir, — It may be of interest to you to know that since subscribing for THE EXCHANGE AND MART some eight weeks since, I have succeeded in selling or exchanging four different articles, and purchasing others, to my entire satisfaction. Your paper seems to fill a place, which no other publication does.

Very truly, N. M. STARBIRD, JR.

EDITOR OF EXCHANGE AND MART:

Dear Sir, — I had no trouble in disposing of the skates advertised in your paper.

Yours truly,

LOUIS HOYSRADT.

Rondout, N. Y.

Dear Sir, — Thanks to your paper, Mr. W. C. Wesson, Hardwich, Mass., has disposed of his pair of Jersey oxen.

Yours truly,

G. C. MORTON.

PIERCEVILLE, IOWA, Jan. 22, 1886.

EXCHANGE AND MART, BOSTON, MASS.

Gentlemen, — Enclosed find fifty cents for which please extend my subscription to EXCHANGE AND MART, to that amount. I don't want to miss a single number. I have made several satisfactory exchanges from my first insertion.

I think it is a real benefit, not only to agents but to everybody, as a medium through which to make known their wants. Success to you, gentlemen.

Very respectfully,

FRANK M. LYON.

P. O. at Utica, Ia., box 33.

PERHAPS some of our readers would like to write and see that the above are genuine. They are welcome to do so. — ED.

We want the missing covers of the volumes below, or the page with the exchangers' names, Golden Days:—

Vol. III. Nos. 46, 50, 52.

Vol. IV. Nos. 5, 41, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52.

Vol. V., VI., VII., complete.

We want the following covers of Harper's Young People:—

Vol. II. No. 98.

Vol. IV. Nos. 212 to 216.

Vol. VI. Dec. 8, 15.

WHEN advertisers wish any alterations made in ads, they must give the heading and description, otherwise the whole paper must be gone through to find it.

WHEN sending five cents for a copy of paper that contains an expected ad, mention the date of the issue; which will always be ten days from the Wednesday after the day it arrives.

A CENT apiece is given for covers missing in the list of Harper's Young People or Golden Days.

SHOULD any of our readers wish to have THE EXCHANGE AND MART for sale in their own neighborhood, by mentioning the fact to their newsdealer, and sending us his name and address, this can be done.

READERS will find it much more to their own advantage if they will not crowd all sorts of things into one notice.

The object of classification is that there may be a regular place to look for what is wanted. If this were not so, THE EXCHANGE AND MART would be on the same level with the wants in a newspaper, which has everything mixed up so, that, although the very thing you want might be there, yet, not seeing it at once, the chance is lost because you can't find it.

We can furnish the below-mentioned Periodicals and Magazines, together with the AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART (the subscription price of which is $1 per year), at the following reduced rates:—

No paper can be ordered without the EXCHANGE AND MART, and cash must accompany all orders.

To the boy who will send us in the largest number of subscriptions before the first of June, we will give a prize of $5.

Now who will be the fortunate one? We want to get 1,000 more subscribers in that time.

Every one stands a chance of winning this liberal prize. Show the paper to everybody and say they can make money by subscribing, and you may come in first. Don't forget this.

Send them in as fast as you get them and we will credit you with the number.

Essie (age 7) — No, indeed, I'm not.

Mr. Coldeash — And why not, little darling?

Essie — Because there's your wife looking on, and I don't want to make trouble in the family!

A NEGRO was holding a cow which a squinting man was to knock on the head with an axe. The darkey, observing the man's eyes, in some alarm inquired, "You gwine to hit whar you look?" — "Yes." — "Den," said Cuffee, "hold dis cow yourself!"

"THIS art' craze is going too far," said Brown, when a pot of paint fell from a second-story window and struck him on the head. "No more decorated tiles for me," he mournfully added, as he began to scrape the yellow paint off his silk hat with a knife.

NUMISMATICS.

NOTES.

In 1878, three varieties of dollars were issued. One having but three leaves, an olive branch on the reverse — this being the rarest variety — the others having nine leaves. On the other varieties, the eagle on one has eight tail feathers, the other seven.

A fine specimen of the 1794 half-dime is worth about $6.

California, under Spain, had five coins struck; in 1747, a two-reals piece. In 1790, two varieties of one real, two reals, and eight reals. All were silver and were struck for Los Angeles.

There are only about fifty collectors of gold coins in the United States.

In 1883, three varieties of nickel five-cent pieces were issued. One, the same style as previous issues, and a new style on which the word "cents" was omitted. This was found to be against the laws of the United States, and was followed in a very short time, by the same style as is now in use. Those without the word "cents" are rare, and collectors not having any should procure one at once, before they become more rare.

OUR COIN LAWS.

A VALUABLE HISTORICAL RESUME. — A COMPLETE ACCOUNT OF OUR COINAGE FROM THE ADOPTION OF THE FEDERAL CONSTITUTION.

PART II.

On the twelfth of February, 1873 (17 stat., 421-436), an act revising and amending the laws relating to the mint and coinage was passed, which is known and designated by law as the "Coinage Act of 1873," and all other acts and parts of acts inconsistent therewith are repealed.

This act provides that the standard for both gold and silver coins shall be nine hundred fine, that is, that all coins shall be nine hundred parts pure and one hundred parts alloy; that the alloy of the gold shall be silver and copper, the silver in no case to exceed one-tenth of the whole alloy; and the alloy of the silver coins to be wholly copper.

This act provides that the gold coins of the United States shall be a $1 piece, which at the standard weight, 25 8-10 grains, shall be the unit value; a quarter eagle, or $2.50 piece; a $3 piece; a half eagle, or $5 piece; an eagle, or $10 piece; and a double eagle or $20 piece, and that these gold coins shall be legal tender in all payments, that the silver coins shall be a trade dollar, a half dollar or fifty-cent piece; a quarter dollar or twenty-five cent piece; and a dime or ten-cent piece; that the weight of the trade dollar shall be four hundred and twenty grains troy, and the weight of the half dollar, twelve and one half grammes, and the quarter dollar and dime, respectively, one-half and one-fifth the weight of the half dollar, and that the silver coins shall be legal tender for any amount not exceeding $5, in any one payment; and the coinage of any other gold or silver coins than those named above is prohibited.

The revised statutes of the United States were passed June 22, 1874, and are intended to embrace the statutes of the United States in force on the first day of December, 1873, as revised and consolidated by the commissioners appointed for that purpose. The revised statutes re-enact the statute of February 12, 1873, without change.

The act of July 22, 1876, provides that the trade dollar shall not thereafter be a legal tender, and the coinage of the trade dollar is limited to the export demand. An owner of gold bullion can deposit the same at any mint and have it converted into coin for his benefit without charge. The revised statutes provide that any owner of silver bullion may have it converted at the mints into bars or trade dollars of four hundred and twenty grains troy, but for no other coinage, on payment of the actual cost of coinage. But as by the act of July 22, 1876, the secretary of the treasury is authorized to limit the coinage of trade dollars to the export demand, it would now seem to be optional with him whether owners of silver bullion could have it converted into trade dollars or not.

A WINTER'S TALE.

(From Detroit Index.)

BY GORDON STAPLES, M. D., R. N.

I dozed at last, and awoke, shivering, in the dark. The oil was frozen. Luckily I had my travelling reading-lamp, and I lit that. But how intensely silent it was! The wind had surely gone down, nor was it so cold. The truth was, as we afterwards discovered, we were snowed over — indeed, the cutting was filled in which the train was stuck. When we pulled down the window, there was the snow. We could thrust our arms through it, or rather far into it.

We had some tea, which we tried to heat for the gentle lady over the candle of the lamp, and succeeded. I pitied her; but wrapped in her plaids and rugs, she seemed happy and smiling.

Was it strange that, so situated, the seafarer and I should begin to talk about the sunny shores and blue sparkling seas of the Indian Ocean?

"It was there, on the coast of Africa," said the seafarer, "that I wooed and won my wife here. My wooing culminated with a bit of an adventure."

"Do tell me," I said; "and make it as long as you possibly can. Spin it out. Dwell longest on the prettiest parts of it."

He laughed and complied. But I must here make his story shorter.

"Although," he said, "I am by profession a sailor, still I believe I could make my living on land — indeed," he added, glancing affectionately at the pretty face that peeped out from the bundle of plaids and shawls in the corner, "I am not sure that I have not promised to try to do so, at all events. But four years ago I was not a benedict. I was free to rove anywhere in all the world, and rove I did. I had command of a tiny steam ocean yacht, of which I was also half-owner. She was broad in the beam, but of no great draught — precisely the kind of vessel to explore the big rivers of Africa with.

"Ah! sir, there is money to be made by that sort of trade, and pleasure to be had, too. What was my cargo? A very pretty one, I can assure you; it consisted of ivory, lions' and leopards' skins, gum copal, spices of all kinds, and, last but not least, gold-dust."

"In addition to these oddments, I need hardly tell you that we laid in a good store of 'curios' and specimens of all kinds. It was in the collecting of these latter that most of my enjoyment lay. We always filled up, however, with our paying cargo first; then, leaving our yacht at anchor in some cosy reach of the river — almost hidden, perhaps, by the trees that overhung the water — accompanied by one or two of my men, I would journey inland in search of the beautiful. Or we would drop down the river, cross the bar, and, putting out to sea, spend weeks in and about the numerous lovely little lagoon islands that lie everywhere near the coast south of the equator."

Just at this point the seafarer appeared for a time to forget entirely that he had promised a story of adventure. He let himself drift, as it were, hither and thither on the tideway of his recollection; he gave Memory the tiller-ropes to hold, and permitted her to steer him wheresoever she pleased.

With downcast face, the small boy stood
Outside the circus last;
And while he searched his pockets through,
The surging crowd rushed past.

Alas! the ticket he had lost,
His hopes were blasted for the day;
"First half an hour the show begins,"
He groaned and homeward turned his way.

That eve, to sympathizing friends,
This luckless youth bewailed his lot;
And with looks wh le viewed the torn pocket,
Which all the mischief dire had wrought.

TOILET MEDICINE.

Adult women require one-tenth less the quantity of food than men leading similar lives.

The digestibility of food directly influences its value as a nutritive agent. The sooner it is digested the more valuable it is as an article of diet. If it does not digest at all, it is not merely valueless, but absolutely injurious, since its presence in the stomach calls for a secretion of gastric juice and expenditure of nerve force to effect this, and the movements of the stomach, which always take place when the interior contains any substance.

From three to four hours is the ordinary time occupied by the digestion of food in the stomach, that is, if it amounts in quantity to an ordinary meal.

The following table is taken from Dr. Beaumont's experiments on the man, Alexis St. Martin, whose stomach was laid open by a gunshot wound:

Variety of Food.	Time Occupied in Digestion.
Rice and tripe	1 hour.
Eggs, apples, salmon, trout, venison ..	1 1/4 hours.
Tapioca, barley, milk, liver, sea fish ..	2 hours.
Turkey, lamb, potatoes, pig	2 1/2 hours.
Beef, mutton, and fowl	3 to 3 1/2 hours.
Veal	Nearly 4 hours.

Animal substances are, generally speaking, more rapidly digested than vegetable.

I will here say a word about some special varieties of food. Ripe grapes are very wholesome; they may be taken freely; they prevent acidity of the blood, besides being nutritious. Pears, apricots, peaches, apples, and oranges, may be eaten without fear of any evil consequences. Plums should be taken very moderately. Lemons, if taken by themselves, must be also used sparingly; their essential constituent is citric acid, and the best form for taking this habitually is in an effervescing draught, for the citric acid, being combined with the alkali, forms a neutral mixture which is beneficial to health. But the acid taken by itself, or in the form of simple lemon juice, or the whole lemon, having acid properties, must be used moderately. So the habitual use of lemonade, as a drink, cannot be recommended, unless an alkali be taken, either mixed with it or in some other manner. If twenty grains of bicarbonate of potash be added to every tablespoonful of pure lemon juice, the result will be a neutral compound of citrate of potash; this may be taken in the effervescing condition, or bottled when the effervescence has ceased. The draught may be so arranged as to render it either alkaline or slightly acid, if desired. One cannot with impunity habitually take large draughts of either acid or alkaline drinks without disorganizing the proper constitution of the blood.

Oatmeal is very nutritious, so is the whole wheat-meal bread; white bread is far inferior to the latter. Fish affords more sustenance than an equal weight of brute's flesh; it is rich in phosphorus, and a good nerve food. The brains of the lower animals contain the same chemical ingredients as our own, and afford a great amount of nourishment, especially to the nervous system.

Beef and mutton, when good, should on section present a marbled reddish-brown color; pinkness and moistness would indicate disease, lividity or a purple color that the brute had died without loss of blood, or had been attacked by fever. Good slaughtered meat should be firm and elastic to the touch, have a minimum of odor, and its surface should rapidly dry. Meat moist and flabby, or having a sickly odor, is always bad; to bring out the odor, macerate a small portion in hot water. The color of good pork should be of a very pale red tint. A dark color would indicate that the animal had suffered from trichinosis. If this be suspected, portions of the meat should be examined by the aid of a microscope, and the meat itself by means of a magnifying glass. The Cysticercus or measles is enveloped in a sac often as large as a hemp seed. Good sausage meat may be known by its firmness and the absence of any disagreeable odor; in appearance it is moist and gelatinous.

BONES.

It is impossible to get all the nourishment out of a bone by merely boiling it once or twice. All bones, whatever their size or shape, have, microscopically, the same structure. Their hard tissue (in the cancellous bones, the "hard tissue" answers to the divisions of the cancelli and the outer layer of compact tissue) is traversed by certain channels called Haversian canals; from the canals minute "canaliculi" pass outwards; these converge to certain round spaces termed "lacunæ"—a certain number to each. The Haversian canals are thus surrounded by a zone of "lacunæ," which are connected with the canal and with each other by means of "canaliculi." The Haversian canals contain blood vessels. The lacunæ contain little masses of living matter termed "bone cells," and the canaliculi contain the nutriment which passes from the blood vessels to support the bone cells. The material of the bone cells and that contained in the canaliculi form, when taken together, a great part of the substance of the bone, and they are as nutritious as marrow. But they cannot be extracted thoroughly from the bone unless it is crushed into fine pieces; it is well to grind it almost to a powder. If it be then boiled, very palatable and nutritious soup may be obtained. By boiling the bone whole, or after it had been broken into two or three pieces only, the soup would not have equalled more than half the strength, if so much, of that made from the crushed bone.

ALCOHOLIC LIQUORS.

Alcohol is taken up into the brain and nervous system, and acts thus as nerve food. Consisting, as it does, however, only of carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen, it does not supply those salts which are such an essential part of the nervous apparatus, and whose excretion is correlated to expenditure of energy. From the unstable character of alcohol, the readiness with which it enters into fresh combinations, it readily fulfils the part of a violent stimulant.

But stimulation calls for an expenditure of energy. This expenditure is correlated to the exhaustion or excretion of various phosphates and complex bodies, as neurine, besides other substances; so that alcohol, taken by itself, calls for a greater amount of energy than it can supply material to maintain, leaving the system not strengthened, but weaker. It must be understood that I am speaking of pure alcohol and of strong alcoholic liquors, as brandy, whisky, and other spirits, which contain from 40 to 50 per cent. of alcohol. Wines contain from 17 (Madeira and port) to 7 or 8 (light claret, hock, and similar wines) per cent.; good beer and stout contain from 6 to about 8 per cent.

It must be also understood that in the whole range of medicine there is scarcely a more valuable medicine than alcohol; the thing is to know how to use it. It is veritably a nerve food, but it must be used in conjunction with those other substances which are found in the nervous system, and are necessary for its maintenance; otherwise, although affording a certain amount of material for the development of energy, it acts mainly as a stimulant.

Thus stout, beer, wines, or weak spirits and water may be taken with the meals, or as ordinary drinks at other times, if the individual has a hearty appetite or is taking special medicinal foods, as cod liver oil, etc., and is undergoing great bodily or mental exertion, or suffering from exhausting disease. But the amount of alcohol generally required by the nervous system is so small, and possessing, as the nervous centres do, the ability to form this from the carbon, oxygen, and hydrogen of other compounds presented to them, it is only in exhaustion and debility that alcohol as a dietetic has any very great value.

Taken in moderate amount in health it facilitates nervous action, acting thus as a stimulant and nerve food. It increases the heart's action, both by its conveyance to the nervous centres and the stimulation of the nerves of the stomach.

It dilates the blood vessels of the skin, causing an increased flow of blood to the latter; hence, if alcohol be taken during exposure to cold, the individual will lose heat by radiation; but if the alcohol be taken when the exposure is past, it will prevent congestion of internal organs by driving the blood from them.

Alcohol in large doses, or frequently repeated strong doses, acts locally on the stomach, impairing the structure and functions of the mucous membrane. In the same manner, when taken into the blood, it acts on the liver, rendering it hard and white.

Alcohol lessens the oxidizing power of the red corpuscles of the blood; in this manner it easily reduces temperature. When taken in large amounts, it causes obesity and fatty degeneration of organs. By the physiological process here involved, alcohol will maintain life for some time on an insufficient supply of food.

Drunkenness, and "death from drunkenness" are due to partial and complete paralysis of the cephalic nervous apparatus respectively: First the cortex of the cerebrum is affected, then the person feels excited, and subsequently confused, and the nerves supplying the muscles of speech are not under the complete control of the will, then the sensory ganglia are implicated, and things are seen which are not, as two moons, etc.; next the cerebellum is attacked, and the muscular sense is lost, so that the person staggers. The last part to be affected is the medulla oblongata; when this becomes paralyzed, or functionally incapacitated, owing to alcoholic poisoning, death results.

"Moderation" and "moderate amount" are in themselves very indefinite words. What for one man would be a "moderate," would for another be an excessive, amount of wine, etc. Each case has to be judged on its own merits, and the special circumstances of each must be taken into account. To continue drinking when any excitement or dizziness is felt would be an excessive or intemperate use of liquor. I am not speaking of medical cases, where tectotalers, compelled to take spirituous liquors, find themselves affected by a very small quantity, but of the circumstances of our everyday life. Strong spirits are always hurtful if taken habitually; they should never be used except as medical agents. The amount of alcoholic drink proper for a man in good health must depend on the life he is leading; it will be greater in proportion to his expenditure of energy. For an ordinary man three pints of beer, or two pints of claret, or a pint and a quarter of port per diem will not be excessive. But, as I have intimated, no universal rule can be laid down, for some can take more than double the above quantity, and others not one-half, without being sensibly affected thereby.

Tea and coffee are nerve stimulants, but they are only slightly nutritious; cocoa is far preferable as an article of diet.

WATER.

Avoid having a cistern if possible; if compelled to from the absence of a continuous supply, have the cistern lined with or made of zinc. Cisterns should be kept covered, but ventilation must be provided. The cisterns containing the water for domestic and closet use should be separate, and no communication whatever should exist between them. Cisterns should be cleaned out at least once every four weeks. All water drawn from a cistern should be filtered before being used for drinking purposes. The best filters are those made of charcoal. Rain water, when properly filtered, is as pure as any other.

NOTICE.

A PRIZE OF

$1.00

Together with a Yearly Subscription to the EXCHANGE AND MART is given every week for the

BEST SHORT STORY

Not to exceed 2 columns in length,

Which will be published every Saturday, and the money forwarded on Mail day.

CONDITIONS.

Competitions must be sent so as to arrive at the Boston Office not later than Monday noon in each week. Any arriving after that time will be placed in the following week's competition.

Written competitions must be on one side of the paper only, and on paper not wider than note sheet. Printed matter may be sent, and is equally eligible.

The manager reserves the right to publish any competition, whether it gains the prize or not.

If original a prize of $1 and subscription is given; if taken from a periodical or magazine, which must be of a date previous to 1884, its name must be given, the prize being a subscription for one year only.

Competitors are not confined to one, but may send any number of competitions, which should have "Prize Competition" on the envelopes.

The correct name and address of the sender must be distinctly written upon every competition, for publication in the event of success. Any neglect of this condition will disqualify the piece sent in.

It is particularly requested that no money orders, stamps, or money at all, be enclosed in the Prize Competitions. These must be sent separately.

BLUSH OF ROSES is clear as water, superior to powder. Sold by druggists; price seventy-five cents. Agents wanted. Address with stamp, MISS FLORA A. JONES, sole proprietor, Utica, N. Y. 17a 3m

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.

ADDRESS.

METHOD.—A person wishing to buy, sell or exchange, through our columns, must send the advertisement, clearly written on a separate piece of paper, according to the rules, to the Manager of THE EXCHANGE AND MART, 17 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

RATES.

Bargains under 30 words in length will be inserted free in the Private Columns; over that, half cent each word, according to the discretion of the Editor, as these columns are not intended for those whose business it is to dispose of the goods they advertise.

TRADE ADVERTISING.—For displayed advertisements the rate is 8 1-3 cents a line, twelve lines to the inch. No extra charge for cuts, &c. Trade advertisements can only be inserted in private columns at trade price, one cent a word.

SUBSCRIBERS.—$1.00 a year, post-paid; 6 months, 50 cts; 3 months, 35 cents. We shall be obliged if subscribers will mark against their names, "Subscriber," when forwarding advertisements.

INSERTION.

The preference is invariably given to subscribers' advertisements, unless they are paid for at the rate of one half ct. each word, in which case they will be inserted in the two next issues.

Free advertisements are inserted, as far as possible, in the order in which they are received; but we do not guarantee their insertion, and should recommend their being booked, if important.

Ads. intended for a particular issue must be at the Head Office 10 days in advance.

PRIVATE NUMBER INSTEAD OF ADDRESS.—If the advertiser wish his own name and address to be published, it can be done; but supposing he should wish to keep them private, by intimating this to us, we will attach a number to his advertisement in place of them, the cost of which is two cents extra; and all letters answering his advertisement will therefore be addressed, under cover, to that number at our office, to be forwarded by us to him.

BOOKING.

Advertisements can be booked to appear in any two desired issues, by the payment of one half ct. each word; but if not to appear in consecutive issues, two cents extra must be paid. Advertisements must be plainly marked at the bottom, "2 cents, Book, Sept. 2;" or, whatever the date may be.

REPEATING.—Any number of insertions may be ordered at one time, and only one copy of the advertisement will then be required; but if it is wished to repeat an advertisement that has already been published, a copy of it must be sent, as if it were a fresh advertisement. The price for repeating advertisements is, in all cases, the same as that of the first insertion.

REMITTANCES.—We should feel much obliged if our advertisers would, whenever possible, pay for their advertisements, &c., by Postal Notes, Money Orders or Cash, instead of by stamps. We do not make this a rule, but ask it as a favor. If Money Orders are used they should be drawn on Post-Office Boston, Mass., in favor of Percival Gassett. When stamps are sent we prefer two-cent ones.

ANSWERING.

NUMBERED ADVERTISEMENTS.—When replying to advertisements to which numbers are attached, the number must be clearly written in the top right hand corner of an envelope, thus:

and enclosed, together with a two-cent stamp for each letter to be forwarded, in another envelope addressed to the Manager of THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART, Boston, Mass., who will add the right names and addresses, and post the inclosures, thus bringing buyer and seller into communication. STAMPS NOT TO BE AFFIXED.—The stamps for postage must on no account be affixed to the reply, nor may embossed stamps be used.

POST CARDS.—We cannot undertake to forward these.

NO REPLY.—When there is no reply in answer to an application, it is understood that the offer made is not acceptable, or that the article has been already disposed of.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The Manager reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

SAFEGUARDS.

When strangers are dealing together, it can always be arranged with the express company that the purchase money is to be collected on delivery of the goods.

We cannot too earnestly warn our readers against trusting strangers, until they have satisfactorily proved their good faith. Drafts, and promissory notes should never be accepted; and if references are offered, they should be inquired into before any thing else is done.

APPROVAL.—Goods can be ordered on approval, but their value should be first deposited with our agent, Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street, Boston, for whom we are responsible. He acknowledges receipt to both parties, and holds the money until satisfied that either the goods are returned, or a sale effected; then, after deducting cost of postage, money order, etc., will forward to the right person.

Carriage is payable by the buyer; and if returned, each pay one way.

Form for forwarding money on deposit:—Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street: Sir, I beg leave to deposit $..... with you, as value of.....to be forwarded me by Mr..... of.....(give full address). Yours truly,..... Name.....Address.....

RULES FOR TRANSACTIONS.

TRUSTING—Do not send money or goods to strangers without security. It is obvious that we cannot guarantee the integrity of all who use our columns, although we take every precaution.

POST CARDS.—These may be used for answering advertisements when the address is published, but not otherwise.

CORRESPONDENCE.—A stamped addressed envelope must be sent with any letter requiring an answer from us by post.

GOODS IN TRANSIT.—These are at the seller's risk, i.e., any damage to or loss of an article on its journey, is borne by the vendor or exchanger; but a rejected article must be properly packed and returned by the same means as was used in sending it.

CARRIAGE.—Unless there is a stipulation to the contrary, the carriage of all goods (except such as are sent by post) is payable by the buyer. If an article sent on approval be returned, each party must pay carriage one way, unless otherwise agreed.

APPROVAL.—Unless there is an agreement to the contrary, articles received on approval must not be kept more than three clear days. When arranging a purchase, the right to return the article, should it be disapproved, should always be insisted on.

EXCHANGE.—An exchange is not complete until both parties are satisfied. We recommend that all goods be ordered on "approval."

DISPUTES.—If an article be ordered without any mention being made as to its being sent upon "approval," the purchase is complete and binding, unless the purchaser can show that the description given was obviously incorrect, either by omission or commission, in which case the bargain may be repudiated; but if the seller maintain that the description was correct, the article itself, and all letters relating to it, must be sent to us for our judgment, and the person against whom we decide must pay all expenses of carriage to and from us. The only exceptions are bulky articles and live stock. In these cases, the articles must be returned to the seller, each party paying carriage one way.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The manager does not guarantee the insertion of any advertisement, and reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

Only one class of articles may be offered in each advertisement. Articles of dress (with the exception of furs, feathers, artificial flowers, Indian shawls, scarves, and uniforms), must be new; i. e., never worn and specified as such in the advertisement.

The advertiser's full name and address must be at all times given for the editor's use.

CARRIAGE BY MAIL.

Merchandise in the form of a parcel can be mailed, but must not exceed 4 pounds in weight, the rate being one cent an ounce any distance. The ends must be left open, that the contents can be easily ascertained. No writing can be enclosed. This is preferable for out of the way places to express, but more expensive.

Books and printed matter can be mailed at the rate of 2 ounces for one cent, not exceeding 4 pounds in weight. No limit in weight for a single book.

A NEW way to obtain a subscription to the EXCHANGE AND MART. To any one who will send 500 ads of people who wish to buy, sell or exchange, no matter what the article is, or what paper it is clipped from, except Boston papers, Harper's Young Folks, Golden Days.

PATRONS and subscribers of the EXCHANGE AND MART, writing to advertisers, will confer a favor on both them and us by mentioning this journal. An advertiser likes to know that the medium he uses is of value to him, and when inquiries for orders come in, mentioning the fact that his card was seen in the EXCHANGE AND MART, he knows just where and to what source the credit belongs. Readers can rest assured that on our advertising pages they will find only dealers of known standing and character, and whose representation can be relied upon implicitly.

To the boy who will send us in the largest number of subscriptions before the first of June, we will give a prize of $5.

Now who will be the fortunate one? We want to get 1,000 more subscribers in that time.

Every one stands a chance of winning this liberal prize. Show the paper to everybody and say they can make money by subscribing, and you may come in first. Don't forget this.

Send them in as fast as you get them and we will credit you with the number.

We can furnish the below-mentioned Periodicals and Magazines, together with the AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART (the subscription price of which is $1 per year), at the following reduced rates:—

We want the following covers of Harper's Young People :—

Vol. II. No. 98.
Vol. IV. Nos. 212 to 216.
Vol. VI. Dec. 8, 15.

WHEN advertisers wish any alterations made in ads, they must give the heading and description, otherwise the whole paper must be gone through to find it.

SHOULD any of our readers wish to have THE EXCHANGE AND MART for sale in their own neighborhood, by mentioning the fact to their newsdealer, and sending us his name and address, this can be done.

READERS will find it much more to their own advantage if they will not crowd all sorts of things into one notice.

The object of classification is that there may be a regular place to look for what is wanted. If this were not so, THE EXCHANGE AND MART would be on the same level with the wants in a newspaper, which has everything mixed up so, that, although the very thing you want might be there, yet, not seeing it at once, the chance is lost because you can't find it.

PHILATELY.

NOTES.

Postage stamps were first issued in this country, July, 1847. Before this, postage was charged by the mile, and the postman received the price of the letter on delivery to the person to whom it was addressed.

Some enterprising stamp dealer offers "one hundred varieties of Confederate stamps," for a small sum. According to this the Confederate States have issued about fifty new stamps since the war.

Pennsylvania has the largest number of post-offices of any State in the Union, and Lancaster County contains the largest number of any county in the United States.

There is said to be fifty-two billion letters posted throughout the world in one year.

Some stamps of Indian provinces are printed from ivory blocks, and as ivory does not take ink readily the printing is poor.

THE STAMPS OF THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

BY PHRANQUE.

CHAPTER II.

In 1864, both the one-cent and two-cent stamps were printed in black on white paper. In 1865, a five-cent, blue stamp on blue paper, was issued. It was of same design, with the exception of having "uku leta" above, and "Hawaiian postage" on each side, in place of words given in above description. In this same year the one-cent and two-cent stamps were printed in blue on white paper. The position of words were changed. "Interisland" being of left side, "uku leta" above "Hawaiian postage" on right side. In 1867, the five-cent blue on blue paper, was altered to this design.

Each stamp was type set, and they were printed in sheets of fours, sixes, tens, and twelves, so there are that number of varieties of each. They were also set up several times making many more varieties. There is a thirteen cent of this series sometimes offered for sale, but it is entirely fictitious.

A new two-cent stamp was issued in 1862. Description: Portrait of King Kamehameha IV., in arched square, "uku (leta" in curved label above; "elua) keneta," signifying "two cents," in straight line below, "2" in each upper corner; foliated ornaments at sides and in angles. It was printed in rose in 1862 and changed to carmine the next year. It was lithographed. This stamp is now only found in an unused state printed from a steel plate. When the authorities decided to reprint these old stamps for collectors, it was found that the lithograph had been cleaned off the stone, and they found it cheaper to print from the plate than make a new transfer.

In 1864, a new two-cent, vermilion stamp appeared. Description:—Portrait of Kamehameha IV. in oval, "Hawaii" above, value in words below, both in curved labels, numeral of value in each upper corner, ornamented frame. This stamp is the first of this country to be perforated; all the previous ones being unperforated.

In 1866, a five-cent dark blue stamp, having portrait of Kamehameha V., was issued. The design was nearly the same as the two-cent.

In 1871, three new stamps were issued: one-cent, violet; six-cent, green, and eighteen-cent, red. The one-cent contains portrait of Princess Victoria Kaimalu, the six-cent of King Kamehameha V., and the eighteen-cent of Governor Kekuanoa. These all have "Hawaii" above, value below in words, in curved labels. The six-cent has figures of value in upper corners, the others in all corners. All have portrait in oval with ornamented frame.

PRIZE TALES.

By Cora A. Gilchrist, Belvidere, Boone County, Ill.

FOR ALL TIME.

Twelve o'clock had just sounded from the great clock of an Eastern factory, and the dark doors poured out their stream of busy workers, into the streets, on a dull winter's day.

Dull and dark though the day was, it was all unheeded by one, at least, of that busy throng tripping along with the merry smiles creeping out on the rosy lips, all forgetful of the forbidding skies above, or the muddy streets over which she passed so rapidly, went happy little Genie Alson. How could she help being happy? Was not this the last day she was ever to spend within those dark factory walls, and was there not far away in a Western town a cottage where she and some one else were going to live? And dear old Dad, too, how happy he would be, with never a care or a worry.

Something after this fashion were the thoughts that danced through her brain as she neared her home, and looked up smilingly, to receive the answering smile of the gray-haired man at the window. What did it matter now, all the past hardships and trials she had endured? The work that had seemed so distasteful to her was over forever now, and on the long road that stretched so smilingly before her there was "sunshine all the way." Mr. Alson greeted his daughter tenderly, and pinched her rosy cheek laid caressingly against his own. Their noon tide meal was quickly finished, the dishes removed and the little room with its bare furniture brightened by the dainty hands.

"You will be sure to meet Jack at the train, Daddy, and then come down to the factory to escort me home, for every minute seems an hour now, when it is nearly over."

"It has been very hard for you," said the old man wistfully; "but I would have so gladly made it easier if I could." She laughed that merry, ringing laugh. "Why, Daddy, I believe I should be almost sorry to bid good-by to those old grim walls, but for thinking of the 'good time coming.' But I must hurry, else I shall be late. Good-by, you dear, old Daddy; it's for the very last time, you know," she said, as her hand rested for a moment, softly on the silvery head.

"Yes, the very last time," echoed the old man as his eyes followed the slender form until it was out of sight. It did not much matter to him, he thought; life, for him, would soon be over; but for the bright young creature who had just left him, it was only just begun.

He was very glad that when the time came he could leave her in the care of a strong young heart.

Mr. Alson's was only the old, old story. He had never been a "lucky" man, and after the death of his wife, the mother of his one ewe lamb, health, too, had deserted him, and Jennie had taken the reins of government into her girlish hands. They had come from the pretty village, where the mother rested so calmly under the daisies, to this dull old factory town, and right bravely had she toiled for a scanty maintenance for herself and father. And Jack? Why Jack Gaylor and she had known each other nearly ever since either of them could remember, and all the time she was toiling in the factory, he was working early and late, and for an objective point, the cottage with its bright, pretty furniture, that was now all ready and waiting for its mistress.

To two young hearts, one in the factory waiting so impatiently for the time to pass, and the other speeding to her side on the swift wings of the iron steed, life seemed to have taken on a new lease. The old toilsome, work-a-day world was behind them, and another bright and joyous waited for their coming.

Three—four—five—would the leaden hours never drag themselves by? How often the bright eyes wandered to the window, to note the gathering darkness with an increased flutter of the restless pulse.

She looked at her companions, most of them rough and good-natured. Girls who had grown up without the bright, pure air of heaven, and the most of them, without any restraining influences.

Genie looked at them with a new pity in her eyes. Poor things, perhaps they would have to work there for years to come, while she—

Lost in a happy dream she bent lower over her work and was far off in a world of her own. So far away that she did not notice the first murmurs of her companions till they swelled into a terrifying chorus.

She turned a startled gaze upon them, as they hurried by with terror on their faces. Then she became aware that the building was in flames. Fire began to dart forth in every direction and there was a stampede for the stairs. In the hurry and rush poor Genie was thrown down, her head striking against an iron bar.

She lost consciousness and the crowd hurried by, intent only on saving their own lives. When she recovered, she found herself alone in the room where the merry flames crackled and danced with an ever-increasing strength.

Bruised and bewildered she rose and tremblingly sought the stairs, but alas! only to find them enveloped in flames, and egress from that quarter impossible. With a suffocating feeling she turned and hurried to the window. Was there no help? O God! must she die alone, all alone, and such a horrible death!

A bitter wail went up from that heart lately so full of life and vigor.

She reached the window and looked out into early winter's twilight.

Crowds of people had gathered to watch the burning building. It was reported that every one had escaped, and when Genie Alson appeared at the open window, a cry of horror and pity arose. Mr. Alson and Jack Gaylor had appeared on the scene but a few moments before, and were searching among the crowd for Genie, never doubting that she was safe.

On hearing the cry, they raised their eyes and beheld that slender figure they knew so well standing out from the background of fire that leaped forward so mockingly, as if anxious to embrace their helpless victim.

There was a dumb, piteous agony in the large, blue eyes, lately so full of the brightness of life.

"Jump!" some one shouted up to her.

She looked down, down, and saw the large piles of stone and lumber, brought there for repairs and alterations, and shuddered. "It would be only a leap from one death to another," she murmured sadly as she shook her head.

"Genie!" rang out a man's voice full of anguish.

She recognized him with a glad little cry, even then.

"Jack!" she said.

He would have rushed into the blazing building but they held him back.

It would soon be over now. Every moment the flames came nearer and nearer. To the two men waiting below there seemed an eternity of suffering crowded into that brief space.

To the girlish figure far above them, there came a vision of the cottage in the far West and the sorrow of the two lonely men.

With a last effort she leaned far out of the window. "Daddy! Jack! Good-by!"

There was a last wave of the white hand; the flames leaped madly up and all was over.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Queries and replies thereto, are inserted free of charge; and readers are invited to freely use our columns for obtaining and giving information. Queries or our answers thereto, will be inserted in whichever issue an inquirer desires, if marked at the foot with the name of the day desired. We require questions and answers at least six clear days before publication, as the literary portion of the paper goes to press ten days in advance of its date.

Would you please answer the following in correspondence column, and give date of issue? I received the following-described stamp, through an exchange in your paper. Head to left, encircled in ring with balls inside ring. "Brazil," at top and "Dez Reis," at bottom. It is a Brazil stamp, but I do not know the denomination.

Respectfully yours,

TRADE ADVERTISING.—Five cents a line. Twelve lines to the inch. No extra charge for cuts, etc. Special rates on application. Trade advertisements can only be inserted in private columns at trade price, one cent a word.

INSERTION.

PRIVATE NUMBER INSTEAD OF ADDRESS.—If the advertiser wish his own name and address to be published, it can be done; but supposing he should wish to keep them private, by intimating this to us, we will attach a number to his advertisement in place of them, the cost of which is two cents extra; and all letters answering his advertisement will therefore be addressed, under cover, to that number at our office, to be forwarded by us to him.

REFERENCE BOOK.

ADVANTAGES. Those who are entered are entitled to use an asterisk after their advertisements, meaning that they have given us references as to their honesty; etc., but it must be distinctly understood that it is in no way a guarantee on our part of more than that we have exercised due care in examining the references.

METHOD. Those who desire their names entered on our Reference Book, must give two first-class references, lawyers, clergymen or doctors. Fee for first entry, 75 cts. and 100 tickets. Renewals, 50 cts.

TICKETS are evidence that the person named on them has given satisfactory references and can therefore be trusted.

CAUTION. No one should accept a ticket which does not bear our registered number printed on it or which has expired according been to the date upon it, or which has altered.

REGISTRATION lasts till the end of the current year.

BOOKING.

Advertisements can be booked to appear in any two desired issues, by the payment of one half ct. each word; but if not to appear in consecutive issues, two cents extra must be paid. Advertisements must be plainly marked at the bottom, "2 cents, Book, Sept. 2;" or, whatever the date may be.

REPEATING.—Any number of insertions may be ordered at one time, and only one copy of the advertisement will then be required; but if it is wished to repeat an advertisement that has already been published, a copy of it must be sent, as if it were a fresh advertisement. The price for repeating advertisements is, in all cases, the same as that of the first insertion.

REMITTANCES.—We should feel much obliged if our advertisers would, whenever possible, pay for their advertisements, &c., by Postal Notes, Money Orders or Cash, instead of by stamps. We do not make this a rule, but ask it as a favor. If Money Orders are used they should be drawn on Post-Office Boston, Mass., in favor of Percival Gasset. When stamps are sent we prefer two-cent ones.

ANSWERING.

NUMBERED ADVERTISEMENTS.—When replying to advertisements to which numbers are attached, the number must be clearly written in the top right hand corner of an envelope, thus:

and enclosed, together with a two-cent stamp for each letter to be forwarded, in another envelope, addressed to the Manager of THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART, Boston, Mass., who will add the right names and addresses, and post the inclosures, thus bringing buyer and seller into communication. STAMPS NOT TO BE AFFIXED.—The stamps for postage must on no account be affixed to the reply, nor may embossed stamps be used.

POST CARDS.—We cannot undertake to forward these.

NO REPLY.—When there is no reply in answer to an application, it is understood that the offer made is not acceptable, or that the article has been already disposed of.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The Manager reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

SAFEGUARDS.

When strangers are dealing together, it can always be arranged with the express company that the purchase money is to be collected on delivery of the goods.

We cannot too earnestly warn our readers against trusting strangers, until they have satisfactorily proved their good faith. Drafts, and promissory notes should never be accepted; and if references are offered, they should be inquired into before any thing else is done.

APPROVAL.—Goods can be ordered on approval, but their value should be first visited with our agent, Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street, Boston, for whom we are responsible. He acknowledges receipt to both parties, and holds the money until satisfied that either the goods are returned, or a sale effected; then, after deducting cost of postage, money order, etc., will forward to the right person.

Carriage is payable by the buyer; and if returned, each pay one way.

Form for forwarding money on deposit:—
Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street: Sir, I beg leave to deposit $..... with you, as value of..... to be forwarded me by Mr..... (give full address). Yours truly,
Name..... Address.....

RULES FOR TRANSACTIONS.

TRUSTING.—Do not send money or goods to strangers without security. It is obvious that we cannot guarantee the integrity of all who use our columns, although we take every precaution.

POST CARDS.—These may be used for answering advertisements when the address is published, but not otherwise.

CORRESPONDENCE.—A stamped addressed envelope must be sent with any letter requiring an answer from us by post.

GOODS IN TRANSIT.—These are at the seller's risk, i.e., any damage to or loss of an article on its journey, is borne by the vendor or exchanger; but a rejected article must be properly packed and returned by the same means as was used in sending it.

CARRIAGE.—Unless there is a stipulation to the contrary, the carriage of all goods (except such as are sent by post) is payable by the buyer. If an article sent on approval be returned, each party must pay carriage one way, unless otherwise agreed.

APPROVAL.—Unless there is an agreement to the contrary, articles received on approval must not be kept more than three clear days. When arranging a purchase, the right to return the article, should it be disapproved, should always be insisted on.

EXCHANGE.—An exchange is not complete until both parties are satisfied. We recommend that all goods be ordered on "approval."

DISPUTES.—If an article be ordered without any mention being made as to its being sent upon "approval," the purchase is complete and binding, unless the purchaser can show that the description given was obviously incorrect, either by omission or commission, in which case the bargain may be repudiated; but if the seller maintain that the description was correct, the article itself, and all letters relating to it, must be sent to us for our judgment, and the person against whom we decide must pay all expenses of carriage to and from us. The only exceptions are bulky articles and live stock. In these cases, the articles must be returned to the seller, each party paying carriage one way.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The manager does not guarantee the insertion of any advertisement, and reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

Only one class of articles may be offered in each advertisement. Articles of dress (with the exception of furs, feathers, artificial flowers, Indian shawls, scarves, and uniforms), must be new; i.e., never worn and specified as such in the advertisement.

The advertiser's full name and address must be at all times given for the editor's use.

CARRIAGE BY MAIL.

Merchandise in the form of a parcel can be mailed, but must not exceed 4 pounds in weight, the rate being one cent an ounce any distance. The ends must be left open, that the contents can be easily ascertained. No writing can be enclosed. This is preferable for out of the way places to express, but more expensive.

Books and printed matter can be mailed at the rate of 2 ounces for one cent, not exceeding 4 pounds in weight. No limit in weight for a single book.

HOW TO TREAT BOOKS.

Do not cover the books of a library with paper. The covering is troublesome, and is quite as much injury as protection to the book. A book covered with paper is likely to need re-binding sooner than if it be not covered. A room full of books covered with paper is dull and monotonous. It also reduces the usefulness of the books, as they are less easily identified and kept apart and in order.

Never wet the finger to turn over a leaf. To mark the place do not turn down a corner of the page, nor use a soiled playing card, nor a stained envelope, nor a bit of dirty rag, nor piece of damp newspaper. Use a regular book-mark. One of the simplest and best is a card as large as a small visiting card; by cutting this twice longitudinally from one end almost to the other it will give a three legged book-mark which rides a-straddle of the page, on leg on the page below and two on the page you wish to open at.

If books are allowed to get damp they may mildew. If books get too hot, the boards may warp and the leather crack. Do not put books on a shelf near the ceiling of a room lighted with gas, as the results of gas combustion are highly injurious. Never put books with metal clasps or embossed sides, or albums ornamented with decorative nails, on the shelves by the side of other books, for the delicate bindings will suffer. Such books should be kept in drawers by themselves.

Books should never be classified on the shelves by the bindings or the sizes of the books themselves. Put the books of an author together, as far as possible, however incongruous their sizes may be. And try to keep books on the same subject as close together as is convenient with requirements. — Ex.

"I see, father," said Rollo, looking up from the paper, "that two boys in Maine were frozen to death while going to school."
"Quite likely, my son," replied Rollo's father; "quite likely, a thing that is liable to happen anywhere, even in July. But you never heard of a boy freezing to death while coming from school. Never, my son."
And that gave Rollo something to think about all morning.

"Your brother Ned is a good book-keeper," said Larry to his friend Harry. "How do you make that out?" asked Harry. "Oh, I just take it for granted that he is. He's had my copy of 'Robinson Crusoe' six months or longer."

"In my opinion all men are liars," said Mrs. Bliester to her husband. "Permit me to remark, my dear, in that connection," he responded gallantly, "that you are an angel."

A CLERGYMAN who married four couples in one hour the other day, remarked to a friend that it was "pretty fast work." "Not very," responded his friend; "only four knots an hour."

J. Fernald, Newsdealer, Lewiston.

All advertisements, forwarded to us for insertion, must be clearly written on a separate slip of paper.

We publish this week the commencement of a little treatise entitled "Bird's Eggs and Nests: How to Collect and Preserve them." By Wm. M. Clemens, the well-known writer on all subjects that interest collectors.

After that is finished we propose to enter on the subject of "Insect Collecting," a valuable and instructive study; and all those interested will do well to read Mr. Clemens' interesting remarks.

We want to get one thousand subscribers this month, each one to go ahead of the last. This number we expect confidentially to receive, and being the birthday of the EXCHANGE AND MART will be a delicate and pleasant way of celebrating the occasion by its readers.

We have practically let off fireworks, in honor of the same event, by sending out twenty thousand copies of this issue. A year to-day, was issued a little humble sheet of four pages, which has now been increased by the kind reception it has met with to sixteen.

We can only hope that this will continue, and that the year 1887 will find it thirty-two pages in size.

THE reason why this paper should be subscribed for, is this, that through its columns a great deal of money can be made in judicious buying and selling. Try it and see if it is not so.

THE price of ads. in private columns to all but subscribers will after this be altered to ten cents for twenty-four words; extra words one cent each. Subscribers can send in twenty-four words, free each week; but must also pay one cent each for extra words.

SEVERAL thousand sample copies of this journal are sent out, each week, to persons who are not subscribers. Persons who thus receive the paper, if they do not wish to become subscribers, will confer a favor on the publishers by handing it to some of their friends for inspection. Pass the paper around. Let its merits become generally known.

Any one who sends us in four yearly subscribers, enclosing $4, will have the EXCHANGE AND MART sent free for a year; or six months for four half-yearly subscribers.

No more free ads after the 15th May, except for six months and yearly subscribers.

PATRONS and subscribers of the EXCHANGE AND MART, writing to advertisers, will confer a favor on both them and us by mentioning this journal. An advertiser likes to know that the medium he uses is of value to him, and when inquiries for orders come in, mentioning the fact that his card was seen in the EXCHANGE AND MART, he knows just where and to what source the credit belongs. Readers can rest assured that on our advertising pages they will find only dealers of known standing and character, and whose representation can be relied upon implicitly.

To any one who will send us in the largest number of subscriptions before the first of June, we will give a prize of $5.

Now who will be the fortunate one? We want to get 1,000 more subscribers in that time. Every one stands a chance of winning this liberal prize. Show the paper to everybody and say they can make money by subscribing, and you may come in first. Don't forget this. Send them in as fast as you get them and we will credit you with the number.

A NEW way to obtain a subscription to the EXCHANGE AND MART. To any one who will send 500 ads of people who wish to buy, sell or exchange, of a similar character to those in the Private Columns, not trade ads., no matter what paper it is clipped from, except Boston papers, Harper's Young People, Golden Days.

We want the missing covers of the volumes below, or the page with the exchange's names, and will give one cent each for them.

Golden Days:

Vol. III. Nos. 46, 50, 52.
Vol. IV. Nos. 5, 41, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52.

Harper's Young People:

Vol. II. No. 98.
Vol. IV. Nos. 212 to 216.
Vol. VI. Dec. 8, 15.

WHEN advertisers wish any alterations made in ads, they must give the heading and description, otherwise the whole paper must be gone through to find it.

READERS will find it much more to their own advantage if they will not crowd all sorts of things into one notice.

The object of classification is that there may be a regular place to look for what is wanted. If this were not so, THE EXCHANGE AND MART would be on the same level with the wants in a newspaper, which has everything mixed up so, that, although the very thing you want might be there, yet, not seeing it at once, the chance is lost because you it cannot be found.

PERSONS about to subscribe for any of the leading magazines or newspapers of the country, are invited to look over our clubbing list, and note the exceedingly low prices at which we are able to furnish any of the publications named therein, in connection with EXCHANGE AND MART. Any newspaper or magazine published, whether it is in our list or not, will be furnished at reduced rates if subscribed for in connection with this journal. It should be noted that in most instances we can furnish the two publications at but little advance, if any, on the price of one. Hundreds of persons have subscribed with us, for various publications, during the past few months.

PREMIUMS.

We offer this week only to every new yearly subscriber who sends $1.35, beside the EXCHANGE AND MART for one year,

A CABINET OF MINERAL SPECIMENS, from the Rocky Mountains.

(Price eighty-five cents if ordered alone), and delivered free of cost to your home.

PUZZLES.

No. 1. ENIGMA.

I dwell in hall and castle,
In country and in town,
And e'er in lowly cottage
My presence may be found.

I'm often gay and witty,
Sometimes cast down and sad;
All mankind are my captives,
From ancient sire to lad.

I count among my victims,
The young of noble dower;
While e'en yon peasant maid has felt
Ere now my subtle power.

I'm not confined to country,
To age, rank, time, or place;
In high, in low, in rich or poor,
I show my changing face.

SUNKEN TREASURE.

Doubts have been expressed whether sunken treasure has ever repaid the wages of men engaged to recover it. Frank Buckland, the naturalist, in his "Log Book of a Fisherman and Zoologist," relates one instance, which we give in his words:--

"In July, 1871, I had the pleasure of an interview with Mr. W. Wood, of Herne Bay, who, after having followed the business of a diver for upwards of twenty-two years, has retired faret long and active service. The stories Mr. Wood told me were so interesting that I obtained his permission to publish them.

"Mr. Wood made his first real start in life by an extraordinary and, as it turned out, very lucky piece of diving. If the reader will look at the map of Ireland he will see that outside Belfast Lough, and a little to the south-west, opposite Donaghadee, are situated the Copeland Islands. It so happened that a Whitstable man was a coastguardsman in this district. He heard a legend that a ship laden with a cargo of silver had been wrecked off the Copeland Islands some half a century ago. He therefore communicated with some of his friends at Whitstable who were divers. Accordingly, Mr. Wood and four others put their diving dresses on board a vessel and sailed from Whitstable to Donaghadee.

"The story they heard when they got to their destination was, that the wrecked vessel was in the slave trade, and that she had on board a large number of slaves when she struck on the rocks, and also a considerable sum of money in the form of silver dollars. Nothing would have been known of the wreck having taken place had not somebody discovered human legs projecting above the surface of the water. It appears that the people on board the ship had tried to escape, having first filled their shirt sleeves with dollars; but in getting up the rocks, many of them had fallen back and met with an untimely end, as the weight of the dollars had kept their heads under water. No one had ever disturbed the wreck since the vessel went down, so Mr. Wood and his friends set to work to find out where she was.

"They put on their diving dresses, and for two or three days walked about to and fro at the bottom of the sea, in about forty feet of water, searching for the treasure. This they did by clearing away the weeds and turning over the stones with crowbars, and feeling for the dollars with their hands, as the water was too thick to see. The wood part of this wreck itself had entirely perished through lapse of time and the ravages of the sea worms. After a long and careful search at last they came upon the dollars; they were mostly spread about among the stones, but many had slipped down among a heap of iron ore, which had formed the ballast of the ship. Many of the dollars were worn thin by the action of the water. Some were lying separate, others in great lumps, like rocks soldered together by iron. In some cases certainly this iron had once been handcuffs, used for the slaves. Some days the divers got two hundred dollars; sometimes three hundred dollars; sometimes a thousand dollars; the best day they got five thousand dollars--i. e., one thousand pounds. In all, the number of dollars they got up from the wreck was about twenty-five thousand, which when reduced to English pounds, equals five thousand pounds.

"When the dollars were in the sand they took down sieves and wooden corn shovels, and riddled them out at the bottom of the sea.

"Mr. Wood showed me one of the dollars, which he always carries about him. The following is the inscription:--On one side, 'Carolus iij. Dei Gratia. 1797. Hispan. et Ind. Rex. M. S. R. F. M.' The coin is about the size of an old five-shilling-piece. The Divers Arms, near the Clock Tower at Herne Bay, of which Mr. Wood is proprietor, owes its existence to the discovery of these dollars."

The remainder of the chapter contains a host of information concerning diving enterprise; but I have quoted sufficient to establish one instance wherein the sunken treasure repaid the wages of the men engaged to recover it.

A TRUE STORY OF CANADIAN LIFE;

—OR—

An Englishman's Adventure with a Pack of Wolves.

It was about the winter of 18— that circumstances necessitated my residing for some few months in one of the northerly districts of Her Majesty's Dominion of Canada.

This winter, too, of 18— was celebrated as being one of unusual severity, and as a natural consequence, in those northern latitudes, rendered all beasts of prey particularly ferocious.

I had come out from England for a short sojourn, and had not been long in the country, but still long enough to gain some information regarding the nature of the climate, habits of the people, and a few hints necessary for one who intended to bury himself (so to speak) from all civilization, and enjoy the pleasures of a hunter's life. This had long been my great desire. I had often as a boy read exciting accounts of the perils of a hunter's life—i. e. perils from fire, perils by water, perils from cold and perils from wild beasts. Yet, however, all these accounts of hair-breadth escapes and horrible deaths did not abate within me the desire to shoulder my axe, sling my rifle across my back and plunge into the interminable forests and lakes of North-Western Canada.

I had been (as I said) some little time in the country, enjoying the gaiety and usual routine of pleasure characteristic of a Canadian frontier city, and the time had arrived when it was necessary for me to leave behind me those scenes of gaiety and join myself to the party I had previously engaged to attend a trip for several weeks in one of the wildest regions of the northern latitudes. At length the day arrived for our departure; and I found myself rolling along far, far from the bright and happy (and in candor I may add not unattractive) society in which I had enjoyed so many pleasant, cheerful weeks.

The terminus of the railway was reached, and now I had to learn somewhat of the pleasure of what is here called "staging it." Our conveyance consisted of a strong "bob sleigh," with three seats, drawn by a span of five strong, spirited horses, with nothing in the world to shelter you from the cold except a few fur robes and what wraps the ordinary traveller carries.

In this manner we had to travel over miles of what seemed to me a most barren, bleak country, with no particular features of attraction. We had been driving some three or four days through this wild, uninviting district, with only here and there a log cabin, where we generally stayed to give the horses food and water. The inhabitants of these cabins were extremely primitive in their mode of living and ideas, and generally consisted of a father, a strong, hearty backwoodsman, his wife and from nine to fourteen children, who presented an amusing picture of robust health, ignorance and wondering amazement.

The cold was now becoming intense, and the horses labored considerably in dragging the sleigh through the deep untravelled track. I had buried my head beneath the robes, and allowed my thoughts to travel back to the scenes of pleasure left far behind, when suddenly I was aroused by the driver saying, "There are our lights." At this not unwelcome news I aroused myself from my pleasant reverie and sure enough, not half a mile ahead, I could distinguish through the blinding storm the welcome lights streaming from some half dozen windows.

Here, then, was to be our quarters for the night; and it was with feelings of considerable pleasure I sprang from the sleigh as it drove up to the door, and entered the house amid the hearty greetings of our hosts. It was a moderate-sized, unpretentious sort of a building, built of huge logs, warm and extremely comfortable within, being clean, moderately well furnished, particularly so for such an out-of-the-way place. After exchanging salutations with our host, and being presented to his wife and two healthy and very intelligent girls, we were conducted into what formed the dining-room and parlor of the house. This presented a particularly cheerful aspect. The walls were neatly papered, and here and there hung with some excellent oil paintings, evidently of some old worthies of the last century, and also two very excellent landscapes representing some English rural scene in Devonshire; the floor was warmly carpeted, with what turned out to be a home-made rag carpet, which was very attractive, owing to the pretty blending of the colors therein. The furniture consisted of chairs, arm chairs, a sofa, well-supplied book-case, tables,—and last, but not least, to a fatigued traveller, a grand blazing fire in a huge fire-place, and a well supplied board of good and substantial food.

While staying here for the night, our little party was augmented by some three or four who had returned from the very district which we purposed going to; and they reported considerable trouble on account of depredations by wolves, and that for the past two hours they had been followed themselves by a few straggling wolves, which had come to within a quarter of a mile to where we were then staying.

This, of course, was interesting to us, as it was altogether likely we should have an interview with these same ravenous gentlemen on the morrow, when we resumed our journey. However, we started off by sunrise the following day, and enjoyed a drive through a beautifully wooded country, with a bright sunny sky overhead, and finally reached our destination without meeting with any adventures.

And here the real life I had longed to experience was to begin. For several weeks our daily routine was that of hunting, fishing, shooting and trapping. This sport was, very much to our disgust, materially interfered with, owing to the severity of the frost, which now had shut out all water communication, and our means of moving about were now restricted either to snow shoes, or, when on the rivers or lakes, to skating.

It so happened, after one of the proverbial three-days' thaw of a Canadian winter, that the skating was particularly good, and I had gone several miles from our camping quarters, exploring (as it were) for fresh trapping grounds. I had just set my last trap, and had started for home, for the night was fast coming down, when I thought I heard a strange, low, prolonged, mournful sound, somewhat resembling the bay of a pack of hounds, with the sharper tone of the Scotch collie. Again I listened, to try and detect what it could mean. But no. I evidently was not to have my curiosity satisfied, and so I again struck out for home, skating about at the rate of nine or ten miles an hour. I had not, however, gone more than a mile when the same sound broke on my ear, and this time apparently plainly, and therefore I judged much closer. I could now distinguish what seemed at first the sharp tone of a vast number of young hounds.

And not only did this sound come from up the river this time as before, but it seemed to have branched out to either side, and apparently followed the banks at a distance of about two hundred yards from the river.

It now occurred to me that whatever this noise was it was evidently some creature being pursued. With this thought flashed a dozen others through my mind. Could it be possible that I was the victim of this pursuit? And if so, by what? Good gracious! Was I being pursued by wolves? I voluntarily asked myself. I felt my heart beat with excitement—my pulse had increased to far beyond its usual speed. Though a bitter cold day, I began to feel uncomfortably warm; and now, my imagination being thoroughly aroused, I listened eagerly to catch the faintest sound of my pursuers—for they had either desisted from the pursuit or were creeping noiselessly up to their victim. Which could it be? I listened in horrible suspense for a few moments; when all at once, from both sides of the river, and not half a mile behind me, I could hear the confused and angry din of what now was unmistakable, a huge pack of wolves, divided into parts, trying to head me off.

The perilousness of my situation now flashed on me. Here I was in a defenceless position, in a wild, uninhabited region, from ten to fifteen miles from any help, with no means of defending myself except a brace of revolvers and a large bowie knife; to attempt to fight off a pack of ravenous wolves with such a defence I knew was next to useless. There was but one chance left me for my life, and that was to trust to my legs—and fortunately I was unusually strong, and capable of considerable endurance; so, rising to the emergency of the occasion, I started off on a race for life.

Away I sped, and it seemed to me as if the wings of the wind had loaned me their aid, for the speed I made was simply marvellous. Yet, notwithstanding all my efforts, I could now hear distinctly my blood-thirsty pursuers gaining ground. Again I redoubled my efforts, and shot forward with lightning speed. I had now made some seven or eight miles since I started, when suddenly, just as I was about to emerge from the river on to the lake, I felt something give way and snap, and one of my skates refused to do its duty. Merciful heavens! I exclaimed, what now? Was I to be devoured alive by these horrible creatures? Were my struggles for dear life to be thus outdone? With such thoughts, I hastily bent down to examine the cause of my unfortunate accident, and found that the strap which fastened the skate to my ankle had given way with the extraordinary strain. To adjust another strap, which fortunately I had in my pocket, was but the work of a few moments, and not a bit too soon—for no sooner had I risen from my knees and started off, when the renewed howling of the wolves caused me to look round. A glance was sufficient. There, not more than two hundred and fifty yards distant, were my pursuers streaming down the banks on either side of the river (as if by preconcerted arrangement), and now the whole pack, and it must have been some hundreds, were in full pursuit. I had yet some five or six miles to go before I should be safe, and flight was my only chance, and that only chance I was determined to make the most of; and off I went again at my utmost speed, with the music of the whole howling pack as an accompaniment to inspire me to the adventure. I shot forth from the river on to the lake like lightning, and actually seemed to be gaining headway on my pursuers, when right across my path, lo! I beheld an open expanse of water.

What was I to do? Like a flash the whole thing recurred to my mind. I saw the extreme cold had caused the ice to crack, and right before me flowed a stream of water which appeared to be about fifteen or twenty feet wide. There was but one thing to be done, and that immediately, for my bloody enemies were fast closing up. I must place that water between me and the wolves, or throw up the sponge; but life to the young is sweet, and no sooner had I conceived the idea than I put it into execution. I rushed forward in sheer desperation to take the leap. I sprang into the air—and, merciful Providence! I landed, or rather fell on the solid ice beyond. Now I was comparatively safe, and I felt the reaction coming on which usually follows such a terrible strain on the nervous system. But I must not give way yet; I was not yet safe. The wolves had now come up to the open water. There they were on one side, and I on the other. I felt strongly inclined to be revenged, and fire on them; but prudence forbade it—I might yet need my only means of defence, and I must therefore restrain my desire. After a few moments, I again braced myself up to the work before me, and started off to skate to my only shelter. It was now a bright, moonlight night. I kept on my way, and soon placed a good half mile between the wolves and myself; and looking back, I could see their dark forms still on the far side of the friendly water, and there they were rushing up and down, like tigers in a cage, evidently seeking a place to cross over and renew the pursuit. I breathed now more freely, and now, too, took a more direct course for my headquarters, which I reached in an hour and a half, pretty thoroughly exhausted, and you, my dear readers, may be sure, not particularly sorry to have the warm greetings and congratulations of my friends, instead of the more interesting greeting which my blood-thirsty pursuers had intended to favor me with.

BIRDS EGGS AND NESTS.

HOW TO COLLECT AND PRESERVE THEM.

BY WILL M. CLEMENS.

PART ONE.

The increase in the number of collectors of birds' eggs and nests in this country during the past few years has been remarkable. The science has grown into a profession, and the profession into a business. For the benefit of the young collector, as well as for the aid of the oologist, I have prepared the following paper upon the subject. There is perhaps no locality in the United States where eggs and nests cannot be collected. According to the latitude, the months of May and June are most productive in specimens. Many of the rapacious birds, however, commence to lay their eggs much earlier in the middle States, even in February and March. This is the case with the bald eagle and the great horned owl. Many birds are also to be found breeding in July and August.

The collecting of eggs requires far more care and discrimination than the gathering of specimens in other branches of natural history. When a nest is first discovered, it should not be disturbed until the mother bird has been identified. No trouble should be spared to obtain the certain identification of each set of eggs. If this be made impossible however, the eggs should be carefully preserved and their species ascertained by an expert oologist. Frequently by removing all the eggs in a nest, except one or two, without handling those that are left, quite a large number can be obtained from one pair of birds. As a rule, however, the nest will be found abandoned upon a second visit.

In many cases the nests cannot be removed. Then full mention of their position and character should be made in a note book used for that purpose. Nests constructed in bushes or on trees usually need but slight precautions for their preservation entire and intact. Those found on the ground need frequently to be carefully wrapped or tied together.

The main points to be considered in the collecting of specimens are identification and authentication. Collectors are often misled as to the identification of eggs by seeing birds around or near a nest. Many of the crow family are great eaters of eggs, and mistakes are known to have originated from birds of that kind being seen near nests of which they were certainly not the owners. It often happens that two different birds have their nests located very near to one another, and if they be allied species the collector may be easily misled and deceived. Birds will occasionally, as if by accident, lay their eggs in the nests of other birds, as in the case of the common cow blackbird.

The most complete method of authenticating eggs is that of writing in ink upon their shells, not only the name of the species to which each belongs, but also, as far as the space will permit, any other details or particulars. Note-books should be carefully kept, in which may be given the amount of identification to which the specimen was subjected, the locality where from, the date when obtained, and the name of the collector. It is advisable to do this work upon some regular system, and the following method as suggested by Professor Newton, of England, is worthy of study: The scientific names only to be used, except with a mark of doubt or within brackets, when the specimens have been really satisfactorily identified; and if the identification has been made by obtaining one or more of the parent birds, a memorandum of the fact to be added thus: "both birds snared," "bird shot," or in smaller space: "bd. st." If the identification has been effected only by obtaining a good view of the birds, the fact should be stated thus: "birds seen," or "bd. sn." In case the eggs were not taken by the collector himself, the local name, or the name applied by the finder should only be used. Each specimen should bear an inscription; those from the same nests may be described identically, but different nests, especially of the same or nearly the same species, should never be so marked that confusion can possibly arise. It is best to mark temporarily each egg with a pencil as soon as it is obtained; but the permanent inscription, which should always be written in ink, should not be deepened until after the egg has been emptied.

NUMISMATICS.

NOTES.

The Japanese government intends to withdraw paper money this year and introduce silver currency. Gold will continue to be coined.

A great rarity is a five-franc piece of Louis Philippe, having one R after the Philippe.

It was the custom in some of the small South American countries, until a few years since, to cut both silver and copper coins into equal portions to represent fractions of the original coin and as such they were current. The eight-real piece (or dollar) and the four, two and one-real were all thus utilized.

A complete collection of United States cents is valued at about $500.

A carpet which had covered a floor in the San Francisco mint for five years, was burned and the ashes were subjected to the process employed, with mining dust, $2,509 were realized by the operation.

CHINESE MONEY.

It is only the present dynasty, the Ta Ts'ing Mandchu, who issued a regular and efficient mintage. From the time of the Ming dynasty the year-names have been reduced to one for each reign, so that the legend was henceforth the same for the whole mintage of a ruler.

Regularity in standard is now fairly secured in the issues from the mint of the Board of Finance in the capital, which are the pattern for the provincial mints; but the shrinking of the cool metal, when frequently repeated by the casting from moulds made from pieces and not from the pattern, produces sometimes a sensible difference, which is certainly not disadvantageous to some of the mint masters. The authorized proportion of the alloys was, till 1722, copper, 50; zinc, 41½; lead, 6½; tin, 2; after that time the composition consisted of equal parts of copper and zinc. The obverse bears the name of the reign, read from top to bottom, and the words tung bao, or "current money," from right to left. On the reverse the name of the mint in Chinese, or in Mandchu and Chinese, or in Mandchu only. There has been only one dark period in the present mintage, which for a time sunk to the lowest level during the great Taiping rebellion. The supply of the copper mints was stopped, and it was necessary to cast iron money, the worst of its kind that ever was made.

Silver circulates generally, cast in ingots, in shape rudely resembling shoes, and for that reason called "shoe-silver," with the exception of two unsuccessful (because counterfeited) attempts in 1835 and 1856 to cast silver dollars; the government never issued silver money. In Fuhkien province and Formosa island in 1835, a large issue of native dollars was made to pay the troops on that island; the legend was "Pure silver for current use from the Tchang tchou commissariat (weight), seven mace two candareens." At Shanghai, in 1856, the taels, or dollars, were of the same weight and purity (417.4 grs. troy); and besides the inscription in Chinese and in Mandchu, they had an effigy of the god of longevity on the head, and a tripod on the tail to authenticate the official origin. Gold, cast into ingots, also circulates by weight.

Private individuals have sometimes caused silver to be cast as money; but they are generally satisfied to make, with European appliances, imitations of the Mexican and old Spanish dollars which are in currency; these, as they pass from hand to hand, are punched with the seal or stamp of the owner by way of endorsement; and when the marks are so numerous that there is no room left on the coin for more, they are melted.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Queries and replies thereto, are inserted free of charge; and readers are invited to freely use our columns for obtaining and giving information. Queries or our answers thereto, will be inserted in whichever issue an inquirer desires, if marked at the foot with the name of the day desired. We require questions and answers at least six clear days before publication, as the literary portion of the paper goes to press ten days in advance of its date.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

In reply to a question about denomination of stamp, sent by Carl Grotjan. "The stamp is a Brazilian," 1882 issue. Denomination, ten reis. Answered by Phranque.

H. W. Lineback. Don't know anything of notice sent three weeks ago. Must send fresh copy each time. Would have gone in if it was all right.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.

ADDRESS.

METHOD.—A person wishing to buy, sell or exchange, through our columns, must send the advertisement, clearly written on a separate piece of paper, according to the rules, to the Manager of THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART, 17 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

RATES.

PRIVATE COLUMNS.—Bargains can be inserted at the rate of 24 words for ten cents; extra words, one cent each, two insertions. The Private Columns are not intended for dealers, or trade advertisements. All offers to supply indefinite quantities of goods are trade ads. In counting words, name and address are free, a letter representing a word, as c. for cents, counts as one word, but figures when divided by a stop as—$3.50, and words which are connected by a hyphen, count as two words. See Subscribers.

SUBSCRIBERS.—35 cts. three months; 60 cts. six months; $1.00 a year, post-paid. Subscribers can advertise 24 words free every week, extra words one cent each. One free advertisement only, allowed in the paper at one time. We shall be obliged if subscribers will mark against their names, "Subscriber," when forwarding advertisements.

TRADE ADVERTISING.—Five cents a line. Twelve lines to the inch. No extra charge for cuts, etc. Special rates on application. Trade advertisements can only be inserted in private columns at trade price, one cent a word.

INSERTION.

PRIVATE NUMBER INSTEAD OF ADDRESS.—If the advertiser wish his own name and address to be published, it can be done; but supposing he should wish to keep them private, by intimating this to us, we will attach a number to his advertisement in place of them the cost of which is two cents extra; and all letters answering his advertisement will therefore be addressed, under cover, to that number at our office, to be forwarded by us to him.

REFERENCE BOOK.

ADVANTAGES. Those who are entered are entitled to use an asterisk after their advertisements, meaning that they have given us references as to their honesty; etc., but it must be distinctly understood that it is in no way a guarantee on our part of more than that we have exercised due care in examining the references.

METHOD. Those who desire their names entered on our Reference Book, must give two first-class references, lawyers, clergymen or doctors. Fee for first entry, 75 cts. and 100 tickets. Renewals, 50 cts.

TICKETS are evidence that the person named on them has given satisfactory references and can therefore be trusted.

CAUTION. No one should accept a ticket which does not bear our registered number printed on it or which has expired according been to the date upon it, or which has altered.

REGISTRATION lasts till the end of the current year.

BOOKING.

Advertisements can be booked to appear in any two desired issues, by the payment of one half ct. each word; but if not to appear in consecutive issues, two cents extra must be paid. Advertisements must be plainly marked at the bottom, "2 cents, Book, Sept. 2;" or, whatever the date may be.

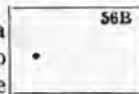

REPEATING.—Any number of insertions may be ordered at one time, and only one copy of the advertisement will then be required; but if it is wished to repeat an advertisement that has already been published, a copy of it must be sent, as if it were a fresh advertisement. The price for repeating advertisements is, in all cases, the same as that of the first insertion.

REMITTANCES.—We should feel much obliged if our advertisers would, whenever possible, pay for their advertisements, &c., by Postal Notes, Money Orders or Cash, instead of by stamps. We do not make this a rule, but ask it as a favor. If Money Orders are used they should be drawn on Post-Office Boston, Mass., in favor of Percival Gassett. When stamps are sent we prefer two-cent ones in strips, if possible.

ANSWERING.

NUMBERED ADVERTISEMENTS.—When replying to advertisements to which numbers are attached, the number must be clearly written in the top right hand corner of an envelope, thus:

and enclosed, together with a two-cent stamp for each letter to be forwarded, in another envelope addressed to the Manager of THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART, Boston, Mass., who will add the right names and addresses, and post the inclosures, thus bringing buyer and seller into communication. STAMPS NOT TO BE AFFIXED.—The stamps for postage must on no account be affixed to the reply, nor may embossed stamps be used.

POST CARDS.—We cannot undertake to forward these.

NO REPLY.—When there is no reply in answer to an application, it is understood that the offer made is not acceptable, or that the article has been already disposed of.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The Manager reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

SAFEGUARDS.

When strangers are dealing together, it can always be arranged with the express company that the purchase money is to be collected on delivery of the goods.

We cannot too earnestly warn our readers against trusting strangers, until they have satisfactorily proved their good faith. Drafts, and promissory notes should never be accepted; and if references are offered, they should be inquired into before any thing else is done.

APPROVAL.—Goods can be ordered on approval, but their value should be first deposited with our agent, Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street, Boston, for whom we are responsible. He acknowledges receipt to both parties, and holds the money until satisfied that either the goods are returned, or a sale effected; then, after deducting cost of postage, money order, etc., will forward to the right person.

Carriage is payable by the buyer; and if returned, each pay one way.

Form for forwarding money on deposit:—Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street: Sir, I beg leave to deposit $..... with you, as value of..... to be forwarded me by Mr..... of..... (give full address). Yours truly,..... Name..... Address.....

RULES FOR TRANSACTIONS.

TRUSTING.—Do not send money or goods to strangers without security. It is obvious that we cannot guarantee the integrity of all who use our columns, although we take every precaution.

POST CARDS.—These may be used for answering advertisements when the address is published, but not otherwise.

CORRESPONDENCE.—A stamped addressed envelope must be sent with any letter requiring an answer from us by post.

GOODS IN TRANSIT.—These are at the seller's risk, i.e., any damage to or loss of an article on its journey, is borne by the vendor or exchanger; but a rejected article must be properly packed and returned by the same means as was used in sending it.

CARRIAGE.—Unless there is a stipulation to the contrary, the carriage of all goods (except such as are sent by post) is payable by the buyer. If an article sent on approval be returned, each party must pay carriage one way, unless otherwise agreed.

APPROVAL.—Unless there is an agreement to the contrary, articles received on approval must not be kept more than three clear days. When arranging a purchase, the right to return the article, should it be disapproved, should always be insisted on.

EXCHANGE.—An exchange is not complete until both parties are satisfied. We recommend that all goods be ordered on "approval."

DISPUTES.—If an article be ordered without any mention being made as to its being sent upon "approval," the purchase is complete and binding, unless the purchaser can show that the description given was obviously incorrect, either by omission or commission, in which case the bargain may be repudiated; but if the seller maintain that the description was correct, the article itself, and all letters relating to it, must be sent to us for our judgment, and the person against whom we decide must pay all expenses of carriage to and from us. The only exceptions are bulky articles and live stock. In these cases, the articles must be returned to the seller, each party paying carriage one way.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The manager does not guarantee the insertion of any advertisement, and reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

Only one class of articles may be offered in each advertisement. Articles of dress (with the exception of furs, feathers, artificial flowers, Indian shawls, scarves, and uniforms), must be new; i. e., never worn and specified as such in the advertisement.

The advertiser's full name and address must be at all times given for the editor's use.

CARRIAGE BY MAIL.

Merchandise in the form of a parcel can be mailed, but must not exceed 4 pounds in weight, the rate being one cent an ounce any distance. The ends must be left open, that the contents can be easily ascertained. No writing can be enclosed. This is preferable for out of the way places to express, but more expensive.

Books and printed matter can be mailed at the rate of 2 ounces for one cent, not exceeding 4 pounds in weight. No limit in weight for a single book.

J. Fernald, Newsdealer, Lewiston.

All advertisements, forwarded to us for insertion, must be clearly written on a separate slip of paper.

SUBSCRIBERS papers are now to be sent off from a printed list, which, we hope will be correct. So, if subscribers will notify us of anything to be changed we shall be obliged. The date opposite the name, signifies the date of expiry.

We have made special arrangements and shall have soon some very telling circulars for agents. We want one good one in every town in the States. The plans we have prepared must, if carried out, prove successful, and $10 a week, at least, easily earned by all.

OUR great aim is to have the EXCHANGE AND MART for sale at all newsdealers. They will be glad enough to sell it, and if you want it occasionally, tell them so, and also that they can get it from the New England or American News Co. It is as simple as A, B, C. Please help us.

READERS knowing friends who would be interested in THE EXCHANGE AND MART, on sending us a list of their names, we will forward them a sample copy.

ADVERTISERS can easily reckon the issue in which their ad. will appear. Add ten days to the Wednesday after which it arrives at the Boston office. The latest ads. run a risk of being left out through pressure.

PATRONS and subscribers of the EXCHANGE AND MART, writing to advertisers, will confer a favor on both them and us by mentioning this journal. An advertiser likes to know that the medium he uses is of value to him, and when inquiries for orders come in, mentioning the fact that his card was seen in the EXCHANGE AND MART, he knows just where and to what source the credit belongs. Readers can rest assured that on our advertising pages they will find only dealers of known standing and character, and whose representation can be relied upon implicitly.

We should be glad to hear from any one having complete volumes for the last three years of the below-mentioned papers, or any others having exchanges in, other than Harper's Young People, Golden Days, House-keeper, Household, Tidings from Nature, Household Monthly, Popular Gardening, Young America, and Tribune and Farmer stating the paper and volumes they have, bound or unbound:—Family Herald, Our Young People, Springfield, and Farm and Fireside. Our wish is to hire them to copy the exchangers names, and we offer liberal terms to those willing to oblige us.

We have received complete volumes of Golden Argosy, and volume for 1884 of The Household.

HAVING made liberal arrangements for insertion of subscribers' ads., those who are found attempting to take advantage of us will forfeit their subscription, as we shall insert nothing more for them.

WE beg to call our reader's attention to our having adopted a reference system, which will be specially valuable to those who are constantly dealing through our columns.

THOSE who possess our tickets are entitled to have an asterisk placed against their names signifying that we have inquired into their references, etc. And so that as far as we can learn they are entirely trustworthy. For particulars see general directions.

SOMETHING FOR YOUNG PEOPLE.

About Rats.

Not only is the rat very fond of good living, but he is said to exercise considerable ingenuity sometimes in his endeavors to satisfy his dainty tastes. A Norwich gentleman relates the following occurrence which happened some fifty years ago when he was a pupil at a large school in Jersey:—

"The principal of the school possessed some fine Dorking fowls, and their eggs were his special delight for breakfast. But somehow these eggs mysteriously disappeared from the nests, and the natural conclusion arrived at by him was that they had become the prey of some one of the unruly spirits under his charge. A strict watch was kept, but the eggs disappeared as usual. I was on watch one day, and I was attracted by the stealthily and peculiar movements of three old rats, when suddenly I saw one roll an egg to the edge of the nest, and the two others helped it gently down the pebbled floor of the stable in which the nests were. Once on to the floor, how to get it away without breaking it against the stones was the evident problem in the minds of the thieves. This was solved (incredible as it may appear) by one of the rats lying on his back, and the other two rolling the egg up between the four paws, and they then seizing him by the tail and dragging him over the stones to their hole. I mentioned this fact to the principal, who smiled dubiously, and evidently looked upon it as a story invented to save my fellows. Nevertheless, the rat-catcher and his ferrets appeared a few days afterwards, and the principal's breakfast table was speedily re-furnished with his favorite eggs."

There seems to be no limit to the mischief which rats can do when they are so minded. A striking instance of this was lately quoted by a writer in Little Folks.

"A vessel was lying ice-bound in the harbor of a seaport town, and, as is usually the case with ships, she carried a crew of rats in addition to her sailors and cargo. Well I suppose there is nothing these animals dislike more than idleness, and so they set about gnawing a hole through a plank just above the ice. The hole was not noticed, and as soon as the increasing weight of snow caused the vessel to settle down, the water at length entered it, and the ship sank. Fortunately not much harm was done, as she lay in the harbor. The water was in due time bailed out, and the vessel repaired. Small thanks, however to the rats."

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Queries and replies thereto, are inserted free of charge; and readers are invited to freely use our columns for obtaining and giving information. Queries or our answers thereto, will be inserted in whichever issue an inquirer desires, if marked at the foot with the name of the day desired. We require questions and answers at least ten clear days before publication, as the literary portion of the paper goes to press ten days in advance of its date.

SOMETHING FOR THE LADY READERS.

A Practical Melange.

BY MARY C. HUNGERFORD.

BEES AS STORM WARNERS.—PATCHING.—COFFEE BAG RUGS.—SALT MEAT.—STYLISH AND CHEAP.

An enthusiastic German says that people have yet to learn how superior is the intelligence of bees to that of most of the animal creation. He says among other things that bees are perfect as storm foretellers. On the approach of a thunder storm they grow irritable and will attack any one who comes near their hive. Sometimes the barometer has foretold a storm but the bees remain quiet and good-natured, knowing more surely than the instrument that no storm was coming; again when the barometer has given none but fair weather signs the unerring bees have shown symptoms of irritability and the storm has really come.

If a woollen dress comes to grief and is disfigured by a rent, do not attempt to darn it, unless the tear is in a part of garment where there will be a great strain, but gum a patch upon the back, cut the torn edges smoothly, touch them with gum and press them down upon the patch and smooth with a warm iron. For a dark dress color the gum water or mucilage with liquid shoe blacking, or with blue, whichever is best in harmony with the dress to be mended. Men's clothes can be repaired in the same way. Some tailors keep a preparation of gum for the purpose. It is well before putting a patch in to fade it by exposure to the sun, for although there is no disgrace in wearing mended clothes, it is more comfortable to the feelings not to have the patches glaringly conspicuous.

Coffee bag rugs are both useful and decorative in a country sitting-room. Cut the sack the size you wish and fasten it in a frame as you would a quilt. If you want figures on the rug trace them on the surface with chalk. A pretty design is a band of elm leaves just within the edge and an oval in the centre drawn from a small platter, with a bunch of three leaves, or a large initial inside. Procure a long hook and work the design in colored rags cut in narrow strips; make a band of dark around the mat and fill in with a solid color if you can secure enough rags of a shade. Make the figures first as the chalk tracery will rub off easily. Take the hook in your right hand and pull the rag strip held in your left from the back through to the front. Do not sew the rags together as for carpets and do not have them over quarter of an inch in width. After the loops are all drawn through and the mat very closely covered with them, cut them open with sharp scissors; and if the surface seems rough cut it down till it looks smooth. Before cutting the loops open, bind the edges of the rug with dark strips of cloth and put on a bias strip of red cloth pinked on the edge.

If the beef or pork from the brine is too salt to be acceptable soak it over night in sweet skimmed milk. Salt mackerel or cod-fish can be freshened by the same method.

THIS is the season of the year when a poor girl may look as well dressed as a rich one. Rich silks seem warm and out of place while fresh cotton dresses have the beauty of fitness. For ten cents a yard one can buy a crinkled seersucker, or if a more dressy costume is wanted, one can find charming crazy cloths for seventeen cents; sixteen yards will be an ample pattern and no trimming will be necessary, although additional dressiness would be given by ruffles of some cheap laces now worn, or the darned lace that some women make miles and miles of. Twenty-five cents will buy a stylish little sailor hat with a grenadine scarf around it drawn up into tall bows in front, supporting two dark wings. The trimmings will cost seventy-five cents, but a milliner will charge five dollars for as jaunty a hat as this will be when the trimmings are tastefully arranged.

COVERING HAIR-CLOTH FURNITURE.

Elizabeth, Champaign Co., Ill., has the following to say on this subject: Hair-cloth covered chairs, or any others, may be quite easily re-covered at home, if one has any skill in the use of tools. I have paid four dollars to have a sofa re-covered, goods furnished, that I can now re-cover myself in a couple of hours. Still it is a little hard for one's fingers. With a screw-driver, remove carefully all the old tacks, and take off the old cover for a pattern. If the cover is to be put on smooth, it is a very simple matter. If it is put on with buttons, it is a little harder; but is still possible. Take some pieces of twine about ten inches long. Thread a piece into a long darning needle, and draw the twine through the eye of the button. Then draw one end of the twine through the back or seat, in the old place; draw the other end through at a very short distance from the first, and tie them tightly in a very hard knot (you will see how this is done by removing the cover of the back). Some care is necessary to keep the goods straight and in place. Gimp is needed to cover the tacks along the edge, and there are now small brass-headed tacks to put it on with. There is a great variety of goods useful for covering, from cretonne at twenty-five cents, to plushes and other goods at four and five dollars a yard. I have used, and find durable, a fabric called ramy cloth. It is strong, and keeps its color pretty well; it costs $1 per yard. If light goods are used, it is much better to turn under the edge of the cloth a little, though the furniture men do not, and the result is that the cover pulls away from the edge sometimes before it is half worn out. I have covered chairs that have a puffed edge and found it a not very difficult undertaking. If springs are broken, a strong hand is needed to replace them, but it can be done. There are things easier to do than re-covering furniture, but few women can earn the money any easier.

HOW TO MAKE FEATHER DUSTERS.

Lina Mendenhall, Douglas Co., Kans. writes: I see so many items in the H. I. C., which I appreciate very highly, I want to throw in my mite. First I want to tell you how to make feather dusters: I take the largest and nicest chicken tail feathers (turkey's are nicer), cut a piece of cloth an inch wide and six inches long, and sew the large end of the feathers to it. Take an old parasol handle and wrap the strip of feathers, inside out, around it; sew them fast; then more strips in the same way, until the brush is large enough. Finish off with a strip of red leather, silk, or velvet, wound tightly around the ends of the feathers. . . . For fly brushes take fine strips of red, white and blue (or any colored) tissue paper, and bind them firmly on a handle with fine wire.

USEFUL HINTS.

FOR THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART.

By EMMA M. BACHUS.

NOTHING adds more to the cozy, home look of a house than wide, open doors opening from room to room, and hung with beautiful portieres. In many old houses the rooms are so arranged that spaces might be taken away in the partitions between the rooms, cased up as for folding doors, and hung with warm, rich-hued drapery, working a magical transformation.

A HANDSOME umbrella-stand can be made from three feet of terra-cotta pipe, eight to twelve inches in diameter. This should be set upon a wooden stand bronzed or gilded; the pipe should be painted with varnish in colors; a stork and palm tree or a water scene are in good taste.

COLORLED curtains are taking the place of white and tinted muslin; silk or madras are preferred to white lace; heavy curtains should be hung by rings and poles but thin ones may gathered over small poles.

THERE are countless methods of draping; but, gradually, draperies are assuming more simplicity of style.

MILDEW can be removed by wetting the articles, rubbing salt and lemon juice on both sides, and exposing to the air.

To clean a porcelain kettle; fill half full of hot water and put in a tablespoon powdered borax; let it boil; if this does not remove all the stains, scour with a cloth rubbed with soap and borax.

To wash black cashmere, use warm water containing considerable spirits of ammonia; rinse in well blued water of about the same temperature; remove from the line while damp and iron directly.

THE tough ends of beef steak will make a palatable dish when prepared in the following manner: cut them into inch pieces; cut the bits of fat very fine and fry; when they are well browned add a tablespoonful of chopped onion; into this seasoned fat stir a [tablespoonful of flour, mix well; when it is brown taking care not to burn it, add a cup of boiling water, a tablespoonful of vinegar, a pinch each of cayenne and black pepper and salt to taste.

A PERSON who was recently called into court for the purpose of proving the correctness of the surgeon's bill, was asked whether the doctor did not make several visits after the patient was out of danger. "No," replied the witness, "I considered the patient in danger as long as the doctor continued his visits."

ARTISTIC AMUSEMENTS.

QUEEN SHELL WORK.

The next thing to do is to make the handle. Cut a strip of cardboard a little less than the width of one of the side shells at each extremity, but becoming gradually narrower towards the middle. On the length of this strip depends the height of the handle, which may be cut to suit the taste of the maker, but 15in. to 18in. makes a good proportion for this sized basket. Select shells of various sizes to fit the tapering form of the cardboard, and glue them on overlapping each other, as seen in Fig. 5, taking care to leave a space at each end for fixing to the sides of the basket.

If the handle is not stiff enough, glue a strip of cardboard all along it underneath. The handle may now be fixed to the body of the basket, by gluing the spaces left at each end to exactly opposite sides of the basket, taking care to fix each end in front of one of the side shells. The inside of the basket and handle should be lined with quilted silk, and colored chenille carefully and evenly glued on the outside round the edge of the bottom. Attach a colored bow or rosette at each end of the handle, and the basket is finished. It will appear as shown in Fig. 6.

WATCH POCKETS.

One of the prettiest articles that can be made from the Queen shells is the watch pocket, and it is both useful and durable, as well as exceedingly ornamental in a bed-room, the bright, never-fading colors of the shells having a very pleasing effect. There are three modes of making them, and being each very pretty, will be described separately in detail. To make a watch pocket for hanging at the head of the bed you must proceed thus:—Cut a piece of cardboard about 5in. or 6in. long, to form the back or framework of the pocket (Fig. 7).

scissors, only care must be taken not to press too heavily on the shell, as it is somewhat brittle. The cardboard back or frame must now be pierced in a similar manner, the holes corresponding with those at the tops of the shells D C B (Fig. 7), which may now be glued in their respective places.

Draw the ends of a piece of ribbon about 10in. or 12in. long from the back through the top holes of shell B, and tie them in a bow in front, to form the handle to hang the watch pockets up by, and similarly draw a short piece of ribbon through the bottom holes of B and top holes of shell C, and tie the ends tightly in a bow in front, as shown in Fig. 8, taking care to select colors harmonising with the colors of the shells. Next proceed to make a pocket of velvet, or any other material (colored leather makes a very strong pocket) to form a receptacle for the watch. Cut two pieces of the material used the size and shape of the shell D, and a strip about 1 1/4 in. wide at each end, but gradually becoming narrower towards the middle, as shown in Fig. 9. This strip must be long enough to go about two-thirds of the way round the circular, or shell-shaped piece (Fig. 10), and its edges should be neatly sewn to the edges of the shell-shaped pieces, so as to form a bag, as shown at a, Fig. 10, taking care to place the right side of the shell-shaped pieces inwards and the right side of the strip outwards. Now glue one side of the bag into the shell D, and the other side to its fellow shell, fixing the narrow part of the bag (a, Fig. 10), at the bottom, or hinge end of the shells; and having drilled two holes in the hinge of the upper shell, similar to those in shell D, thread them with ribbon, and tie a bow in each corner. Tie a bow at the top of shell D, in the same manner as the one on shell C, and glue chenille carefully in the places where the overlapping shells project a little from the cardboard back, and your watch pocket is made.

FIG. 11.

Fig. 11 represents the watch pocket complete.

WATCH POCKETS FOR A DRESSING TABLE.

There are two methods of doing this; one of them, however, being very similar to the card rack, will require but little description. Cut a flat piece of wood, about one-half inch thick, for the stand, as in the card rack, only with three circular pieces instead of four, as shown in Fig. 12.

FIG. 12.

Make a square hole in the centre, and fix in it an upright piece of wood, projecting about three-quarters of an inch beyond the stand, and cut two niches in it on opposite sides, close to the bottom (see A. Fig. 12). Now select a large pair of shells for the watch pocket, and drill two holes in the hinge of each, and two corresponding holes in the upright piece of wood, near the bottom of the niches. Place the hinge end of the pair of shells in the niches, and thread a piece of copper wire through the holes, twisting it up tightly on the other side to fix them firmly in their place. (To be continued.)

On this lay the shells, placing a very small one at the top, a larger next, and a very large one at the bottom, which must be the back shell of a pair (the fellow of which is to form the front of the pocket), and should be placed with the inside upwards. Having thus arranged the shells, cut out the pieces of cardboard at a a (Fig. 7), leaving none of it projecting beyond the shells, which may now be removed, and cover the frame with silk, velvet, or any other material. Then drill holes in the shells in the following manner:—Drill two holes about 1/4 in. apart; in the top of each of the shells B C D (Fig. 7), and in the bottom of the shells B and C drill holes to correspond; also drill two holes in the hinge of D, one in each corner, as shown in Fig. 7. Agents Wanted for

THE AMERICAN

Exchange and Mart

IN EVERY STATE.

Liberal Commission Paid.

Write to

17 CONGRESS STREET,
BOSTON.

GENERAL DIRECTIONS.

ADDRESS.

METHOD.—A person wishing to buy, sell or exchange, through our columns, must send the advertisement, clearly written on a separate piece of paper, according to the rules, to the Manager of THE EXCHANGE AND MART, 17 Congress Street, Boston, Mass.

RATES.

PRIVATE COLUMNS.—Bargains can be inserted at the rate of 24 words for ten cents; extra words, one cent each, two insertions. The Private Columns are not intended for dealers, or trade advertisements. All offers to supply indefinite quantities of goods are trade ads. In counting words, name and address are free, a letter representing a word, as c. for cents, counts as one word, and figures when divided by a stop as—$3.50, and words which are connected by a hyphen, count as two words. See Subscribers.

SUBSCRIBERS.—35 cts. three months; 60 cts. six months; $1.00 a year, post-paid. Subscribers can advertise 24 words free, not including trade advertisements, every week, extra words one cent each. One free advertisement only, allowed in the paper at one time. We shall be obliged if subscribers will mark against their names, "Subscriber," when forwarding advertisements.

TRADE ADVERTISING.—Five cents a line. Twelve lines to the inch. No extra charge for cuts, etc. Special rates on application. Trade advertisements, receipts, etc., can only be inserted in private columns at trade price, one cent a word.

INSERTION.

PRIVATE NUMBER INSTEAD OF ADDRESS.—If the advertiser wish his own name and address to be published, it can be done; but supposing he should wish to keep them private, by intimating this to us, we will attach a number to his advertisement in place of them the cost of which is two cents extra; and all letters answering his advertisement will therefore be addressed, under cover, to that number at our office, to be forwarded by us to him.

REFERENCE BOOK.

ADVANTAGES. Those who are entered are entitled to use an asterisk after their advertisements, meaning that they have given us references as to their honesty; etc., but it must be distinctly understood that it is in no way a guarantee on our part of more than that we have exercised due care in examining the references.

METHOD. Those who desire their names entered on our Reference Book, must give two first-class references, lawyers, clergymen or doctors. Fee for first entry, 75 cts. and 100 tickets. Renewals, 50 cts.

TICKETS are evidence that the person named on them has given satisfactory references and can therefore be trusted.

CAUTION. No one should accept a ticket which does not bear our registered number printed on it or which has expired according to the date upon it, or which has altered.

REGISTRATION lasts till the end of the current year.

BOOKING.

Advertisements can be booked to appear in any two desired issues, by the payment of one half ct. each word; but if not to appear in consecutive issues, two cents extra must be paid. Advertisements must be plainly marked at the bottom, "2 cents, Book, Sept. 2;" or, whatever the date may be.

REPEATING.—Any number of insertions may be ordered at one time, and only one copy of the advertisement will then be required; but if it is wished to repeat an advertisement that has already been published, a copy of it must be sent, as if it were a fresh advertisement. The price for repeating advertisements is, in all cases, the same as that of the first insertion.

REMITTANCES.—We should feel much obliged if our advertisers would, whenever possible, pay for their advertisements, &c., by Postal Notes, Money Orders or Cash, instead of by stamps. We do not make this a rule, but ask it as a favor. If Money Orders are used they should be drawn on Post-Office Boston, Mass., in favor of Percival Gassett. When stamps are sent we prefer two-cent ones in strips, if possible.

ANSWERING.

NUMBERED ADVERTISEMENTS.—When replying to advertisements to which numbers are attached, the number must be clearly written in the top right hand corner of an envelope, thus:

and enclosed, together with a 56B two-cent stamp for each letter to be forwarded, in another envelope addressed to the Manager of THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART, Boston, Mass., who will add the right names and addresses, and post the inclosures, thus bringing buyer and seller into communication. STAMPS NOT TO BE AFFIXED.—The stamps for postage must on no account be affixed to the reply, nor may embossed stamps be used.

POST CARDS.—We cannot undertake to forward these.

NO REPLY.—When there is no reply in answer to an application, it is understood that the offer made is not acceptable, or that the article has been already disposed of.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The Manager reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

SAFEGUARDS.

When strangers are dealing together, it can always be arranged with the express company that the purchase money is to be collected on delivery of the goods.

We cannot too earnestly warn our readers against trusting strangers, until they have satisfactorily proved their good faith. If references are offered, they should be inquired into before any thing else is done. The only absolutely safe way being our deposit system. See Approval.

APPROVAL.—Goods can be ordered on approval, but their value should be first deposited with our agent, Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street, Boston, for whom we are responsible. He acknowledges receipt to both parties, and holds the money until satisfied that either the goods are returned, or a sale effected; then, after deducting cost of postage, money order, etc., will forward to the right person.

Carriage is payable by the buyer; and if returned, each pay one way.

Form for forwarding money on deposit:—
Mr. E. Baden, 17 Congress Street: Sir, I beg leave to deposit $..... with you, as value of..... to be forwarded me by Mr..... of..... (give full address). Yours truly,
..... Name..... Address.....

RULES FOR TRANSACTIONS.

TRUSTING.—Do not send money or goods to strangers without security. It is obvious that we cannot guarantee the integrity of all who use our columns, although we take every precaution.

POST CARDS.—These may be used for answering advertisements when the address is published, but not otherwise.

CORRESPONDENCE.—A stamped addressed envelope must be sent with any letter requiring an answer from us by post.

GOODS IN TRANSIT.—These are at the seller's risk, i.e., any damage to or loss of an article on its journey, is borne by the vendor or exchanger; but a rejected article must be properly packed and returned by the same means as was used in sending it.

CARRIAGE.—Unless there is a stipulation to the contrary, the carriage of all goods (except such as are sent by post) is payable by the buyer. If an article sent on approval be returned, each party must pay carriage one way, unless otherwise agreed.

APPROVAL.—Unless there is an agreement to the contrary, articles received on approval must not be kept more than three clear days. When arranging a purchase, the right to return the article, should it be disapproved, should always be insisted on.

EXCHANGE.—An exchange is not complete until both parties are satisfied. We recommend that all goods be ordered on "approval."

DISPUTES.—If an article be ordered without any mention being made as to its being sent upon "approval," the purchase is complete and binding, unless the purchaser can show that the description given was obviously incorrect, either by omission or commission, in which case the bargain may be repudiated; but if the seller maintain that the description was correct, the article itself, and all letters relating to it, must be sent to us for our judgment, and the person against whom we decide must pay all expenses of carriage to and from us. The only exceptions are bulky articles and live stock. In these cases, the articles must be returned to the seller, each party paying carriage one way.

DETAINING REPLIES.—The manager does not guarantee the insertion of any advertisement, and reserves the right of opening and detaining any replies which he considers ought not to be forwarded.

Only one class of articles may be offered in each advertisement. Articles of dress (with the exception of furs, feathers, artificial flowers, Indian shawls, scarves, and uniforms), must be new; i.e., never worn and specified as such in the advertisement.

The advertiser's full name and address must be at all times given for the editor's use.

CARRIAGE BY MAIL.

Merchandise in the form of a parcel can be mailed, but must not exceed 4 pounds in weight, the rate being one cent an ounce any distance. The ends must be left open, that the contents can be easily ascertained. No writing can be enclosed. This is preferable for out of the way places to express, but more expensive.

Books and printed matter can be mailed at the rate of 2 ounces for one cent, not exceeding 4 pounds in weight. No limit in weight for a single book.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Trade Advertising, 50 cents an inch. Subscribers, $1.00 per year; six months, 60 cents; three months, 35 cents, in advance, postpaid.

Advertisements of goods to be sold, bought or exchanged, not exceeding 24 words in length, 10 cents; Extra words one cent each word. See General Directions on page 2.

All advertisements intended for Saturday's publication, must be at the office 10 days in advance.

Ask for the EXCHANGE & MART at your newsdealers. If they have not got it ask them to get it for you. It can be ordered from New England or American News Companies.

We should feel obliged if readers will mention this paper when answering advertisements.

The EXCHANGE AND MART is for sale at

BOSTON,

The office, 17 Congress Street. Loring's, Bromfield Street. Cupples & Upham's, cor. School & Washington St. Mutual News Company, 25 Arch St. Providence and the other depots.

MAINE.

J. Fernald, Newsdealer, Lewiston.

All advertisements, forwarded to us for insertion, must be clearly written on a separate slip of paper.

We regret in this number, to have to open a Black List. This is a list of people, with whom it will be advisable not to trade. We warn everybody in the General Directions, against trusting strangers, and this we emphasize now. There is only one sure way, and that is, to use our Deposit System, which allows goods to be seen on approval, at a very slight cost. Names of frauds, will be published in this list, though we hope they will be few in numbers.

SUBSCRIBERS papers are now to be sent off from a printed list, which, we hope will be correct. So, if subscribers will notify us of anything to be changed we shall be obliged. The date opposite the name, signifies the date of expiry.

WE have made special arrangements and shall have soon some very telling circulars for agents. We want one good one in every town in the States. The plans we have prepared must, if carried out, prove successful, and $10 a week, at least, easily earned by all.

OUR great aim is to have the EXCHANGE AND MART for sale at all newsdealers. They will be glad enough to sell it, and if you want it occasionally, tell them so, and also that they can get it from the New England or American News Co. It is as simple as A, B, C. Please help us.

PATRONS and subscribers of the EXCHANGE AND MART, writing to advertisers, will confer a favor on both them and us by mentioning this journal. An advertiser likes to know that the medium he uses is of value to him, and when inquiries for orders come in, mentioning the fact that his card was seen in the EXCHANGE AND MART, he knows just where and to what source the credit belongs. Readers can rest assured that on our advertising pages they will find only dealers of known standing and character, and whose representation can be relied upon implicitly.

WE can furnish the below-mentioned Periodicals and Magazines, together with the AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART (the subscription price of which is $1 per year), at the following reduced rates:—

Table with columns: Title, Price for, with Exchange and Mart, Price Together, Published at. Lists various publications like Wide Awake, Our Little Men and Women, etc.

No paper can be ordered without the EXCHANGE AND MART, and cash must accompany all orders.

PERSONS about to subscribe for any of the leading magazines or newspapers of the country, are invited to look over our clubbing list, and note the exceedingly low prices at which we are able to furnish any of the publications named therein, in connection with EXCHANGE AND MART.

READERS knowing friends who would be interested in THE EXCHANGE AND MART, on sending us a list of their names, we will forward them a sample copy.

WE should be glad to hear from any one having complete volumes for the last three years of the below-mentioned papers, or any others having exchanges in, other than Harper's Young People, Golden Days, House-keeper, Household, Tidings from Nature, Household Monthly, Popular Gardening, Golden Argosy, Young America, and Tribune and Farmer, stating the paper and volumes they have, bound or unbound:—Family Herald, Our Young People, Springfield, and Farm and Fireside. Our wish is to hire them to copy the exchangers names, and we offer liberal terms to those willing to oblige us.

RARE AMERICAN COINS.

Written expressly for THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE AND MART, by E. LOCKE MASON, Numismatist.

NO. IV.

THE 1799 AND 1804 U. S. COPPER CENTS.

There are several of the series of United States copper cents that may be termed rarer and more valuable, fictitiously, than those dated 1799 and 1804 and among these, we specify the American cent of 1793, the 1794 starred cent and the "Jefferson Head" cent of 1795; but there are none of any date that possess the interest of the two above illustrated coins. The United States Mint authorities quote the following quantity of each of these rare cents as coined in the years named, viz:

Table with 2 columns: Year, Whole number coined. 1799, $9,045.85; 1804, 7,568.38

Now we find a sad discrepancy between the figures and the facts. The value and rarity of these much sought after and fondly cherished copper coins could not be as great as at present if the United States coinage for 1799 really embraced nearly a million, as the value above would indicate, copper cents; nor would the 1804 cent be treasured and valued as it is by thousands of numismatists, if there were over seven hundred thousand of these desirable coppers coined.

As we have said, in previous numbers of these articles, there is no correct account of the coinages of the years 1799 and 1804, either in the United States Mint at Philadelphia, the Treasury Department, at Washington, or elsewhere. The fact is that the total value of cents, as given by the United States Mint reports for the years named embrace four years that is—

Table with 2 columns: Fiscal year, Dates. 1st fiscal year, July 1, 1798, to June 30, 1799; 2d " " " " 1803, " " 1804

Thus we see that four years are included in the statement of coinages of the United States Mint, and the very common 1798 and 1803 cents are included in the issues for 1799 and 1804.

If we were asked to guess, after an experience as a coin dealer of upward of twenty-five years, what number of these two rare American coins were issued, we should say about 2,500 of 1799 and 1800 of the date 1804.

We confidentially believe that the 1804 cent is the rarest of the two dates, although the cent of 1799 will always fetch the highest fictitious price, either by auction or at private sale. Our own experience is that there are more copper cents dated 1799 than 1804. Upon one occasion (1867) the late Prof. M. W. Dickerson of Philadelphia offered us seventy United States copper cents dated 1799; all poor, as is the case of most of this date, but all genuine, and we made a bid of one dollar each (worth now in same condition $5 each). During all the years of our numismatic career, and while manipulating public coin sales by auction in New York and Philadelphia we have found three 1799 cents to two of 1804.

In reference to the present fictitious value of these two numismatics rarities, we would say, that an uncirculated, or more properly speaking, an unworn copper cent of 1799, of good color and sharp, would fetch at public auction almost as much as an 1804 United States silver dollar; or to come down to plain figures five to eight hundred dollars. A 1799 cent in the latter condition, is unknown, either at home, or abroad, in the cabinet of any private collector of State, or institution. The same can be said of the 1804 cent, with two or perhaps three exceptions, although the fictitious value of the latter would not reach half the price of the former—conditions and sharpness of pieces being equal. J. J. Mickley, the late Numismatic expert (whose cabinet of American coins before his great loss by robbery was not excelled in value, or condition, in the United States) spent nearly a lifetime in the search for a good 1799 copper cent. Mr. Mickley's object at first was to secure a cent of the date of his birth, as a pocket piece and he often told us that he secured every other date of the cent series before he obtained the long-sought-for date, 1799, and this simple object in Mr. Mickley's life led up to the formation of one of the grandest cabinets of American coins known at the time of his great loss by burglars in the year 1867, and gave to American Numismatic History, one of the best of contributors, whose decease numismatists of two hemispheres constantly deplore.

A PHILATELIST'S OBSERVATIONS ABROAD.

J. M. PARTELLO, in "The Stamp Collector."

To fully appreciate the magnitude and extent of stamp collecting one must travel. Your correspondent undertook a short pleasure trip across the Atlantic last fall, and while on the other side, in three short months learned more of the beautiful art of forgeries than he had ever dreamed of in the previous twenty years of his existence. In a word Europe is full of forgers and forgeries. My excursion, while strictly one of pleasure, yet was also one of great profit and experience regarding the study we all take so much delight in. My albums, of course, accompanied me in my wanderings over the continent, and were in almost daily consultation with me. I made many additions to my six volumes in point of rarity and variety and also picked up as curiosities a few well-executed imitations of old and obsolete issues. America may be in its youth, so to speak, regarding stamp collections, but Europe certainly is in its old age, and perhaps its dotage, too, when we come to consider the curse of forgery which is fast dragging the beautiful art into low degrees. Our philatelic atmosphere is decidedly purer and clearer than the transatlantic "ozone." The day following my arrival at Antwerp, I strolled around the ancient thoroughfares of the pre-historic old "burg," just to see what I could see. I was at once struck with astonishment and surprise at the wonderful number of stamp dealers, with their wares so seductively displayed in their store windows. Everybody seemed to have a finger in the business. In the windows of shoe stores could be seen sheets of every kind of postage, adhesives and envelopes, revenue, and telegraph stamps. In the grocery stores, perched on heaps of greasy soap or on piles of questionable-looking brown sugar, were sets of rare and unused stamps. The Bon Marche had them; the millinery shops sold them; the tobacconists retailed them, and the bookstores wholesaled them. Poor, innocent stamps, what a hard time they must have had—that is, the good ones!

I verily believe that in the one town of Antwerp, there are more stamps of good and bad character than there are in the whole United States, with Canada thrown in. But what struck me as the most curious of all was the vast number of dealers, compared with the limited number of collectors. Where were the collectors? It occurred to me then that a majority of these fellows must be stamp sharks and that they must thrive upon somebody.

Sure enough, from a little quiet observation and close attention to straws, I was not long in discovering that just such greenhorns as I was supposed to be usually swallowed the bait whole, without so much as nibbling.

As a rule, foreigners were the victims, and Americans and Englishmen did the most swallowing. Here was a go, and from the first I resolved to be on my guard. I paused in front of a flush-looking window, the frontispiece of a prominent bookstore in the Rue Otto Venus, and stood there in a sort of regretful admiration at the wonderful display of unused rarities lavishly strung out over some twenty-five or thirty square feet of space that might have been put to better use. Regret that so much good paper should be made the means of compounding a fraud, and admiration at the unblushing cheek and gall of the individuals who could enter on and keep up such gigantic schemes of deception with impunity. As I steeled there scanning the lot and trying my best to separate the clean from the unclean, a smooth-tongued, oily-spoken old gentleman, who ought to have been in jail, came to the door with a bland smile upon his countenance, rubbing his hands industriously, and at the same time inquired if "Monsieur would like to view some real genuine timbres poste at a ruinous low figure?" I told him in bad French that Monsieur would do a little viewing and so stepped inside to view, as it were. The respectable old gentleman looked me over with a cold, critical eye, and evidently took me for a greenhorn. I returned the stare with interest, and sized him up to be a rascal who wanted to fleece me. I was nearer the truth in my estimate than he was in his. Down came a huge volume containing scores of sheets of all kinds of stamps, among which were many desirable specimens, good and cheap, but the counterfeits outnumbered the others at least fifty per cent. I turned page after page until I came to a leaf containing some rare U. S. envelopes, unused, and all cut neatly square. Adorning this particular page were members of the 1853 issue of envelopes, such as the ten cents green on buff and on white; six cents red and ten cents green, on buff and on white, 1857-60 issue; three cents pink on blue paper, 1861 issue; and many others that needed only a glance to detect their spuriousness. These truly beautiful specimens averaged about thirty centimes apiece, or six cents each.

"Will Monsieur have that set?" inquired the dealer. "So cheap, and a positive loss to part with them."

"Where did you get them?" I inquired.

"Came direct from the postoffice in Washington" (he took me for an Englishman); "the postmaster general himself sent them over."

What exasperating nonsense! I mentally ejaculated. As if the head chief of our postal service would have any dealings with a questionable stamp dealer in far-away Antwerp. "Is that really so?" remarked I, with difficulty keeping my gravity.

"Oui, Monsieur; true as the cross," said the man, with Uriah Heep humbleness.

"Very well; I'll take the set;" and tossing a five-franc piece on the counter, which, by the way, was instantly snatched up by the innocent old gentleman. I waited for my change. But no change was forthcoming.

"Monsieur take stamps for the balance?" insinuated my enemy.

This was cheeky, to say the least. He had got my money, and was going to force me to take the remainder due in trade.

What was I to do? Alone, on a foreign shore, with no friends at hand and my native country 3,000 miles away, I thought it best under the circumstances to "take it out in trade." Glancing over the big book again, I saw many genuine stamps, none of which, however, was I in any pressing need of; but still the persuasive eloquence of the respectable old gentleman lingered with me, and as the stamps were marked very low, I quickly made up my mind what to do. To own the truth, every stamp in the establishment, good or bad, was priced at least fifty per cent. below standard catalogue figures. In turning the leaves slowly over, I noticed that there was a generous assortment of current Belgian issues, and that they were marked at face value. These stamps I very well knew would pass as money anywhere in Antwerp. Here was my opportunity. Selecting the amount due me, I quickly folded them up and passed the same into my vest pocket before the astonished vendor of false goods could interpose an objection. Making him a polite bow and wishing him a very pleasant bon jour, I stepped outside on to the pavement and hurried down the street. After this neat coup d'etat, he must have taken me for a Yankee, as I played him a Yankee trick. Elsewhere in Antwerp I found many good stamps at cheap prices, and made it a point to lay in a fair stock of the same whether I wanted them to fill vacancies in my books or not. I bought a great many Persian and Turkish, fine specimens, and didn't have to pay fancy prices for them either. In one small bookstore, hid away among the tall houses of an out-of-the-way street, I ran across what some would consider a bonanza. The dame and daughter who presided over the establishment, at my request to see some stamps, politely exhibited to me half a dozen good fat volumes, containing a very large assortment of adhesives and varieties. In a separate parcel were the uncut envelopes. I was somewhat surprised that so small a "shop" as this particular place of business appeared to be, and a bookstore at that, should carry a stock of philatelic goods that would have been a dealer's outfit in our own country. With a smile the pleasant lady let me into the secret, upon my making known what I desired to learn. The stock she carried was owned by a Parisian firm who passed them along from one city to another, each successive handler making a return of sales to the home office, and then sending them on to the next town. Of course, commissions were paid each according to the amount of business done. For instance, the six volumes I was then looking over were to go to Brussels next day, and in return or exchange, an invoice would arrive from Amsterdam to replace the volumes en route to Brussels. Each intermediate salesman or saleswoman kept their respective lots at least a fortnight before forwarding to the next. It struck me as being quite a bright idea, as the goods were, in the manner described, perhaps displayed to thousands of eyes that might never have had the feast had the stamps been held by the owners in Paris and merely advertised. In my opinion, one of the greatest delights as well as the greatest inducements to stamp collecting is simple observation. One's desire to possess is always enhanced by seeing the possessions of others, and I am afraid many of us are inclined to covet. Therefore I think the system in vogue throughout northern Europe of passing stamps along from town to town and from city to city is a good one; that it serves to keep alive the interest of those already under the influence, and also tends to awaken the latent faculties of those who as yet know nothing of the delights in store for them. The big firm at Paris, in the manner described, thus kept their tremendous stock swinging around the circle, and no doubt created in localities a business and trade which would probably never have sprung into existence save for their happy idea. But I find my philatelic musings are carrying me off into endless ramblings, and so I will close right here, lest your many readers become tired with my everlasting "gabble," and class me with the long-winded preachers we hear or read about and yet dread to listen to. More anon.

HOUSEHOLD COLUMN.

Housekeepers' Improvement Club.

To all housekeepers.—Every lady reader of THE EXCHANGE AND MART, old or young, no matter where residing, is invited to consider herself a Corresponding Member of the Housekeepers' Improvement Club, and to send to the Secretary (care of THE EXCHANGE AND MART office) any notes, descriptions, suggestions, inquiries, answers to questions, etc. Familiar, free talk is always acceptable about everything pertaining to in-door work, to the outside surroundings of the home, of cooking, health, clothing, furniture, care of children, adornments—in short, about all kinds of domestic or home duties and cares.—SECRETARY.

PRACTICAL MELANGE,

Written for THE EXCHANGE AND MART.

BY MRS. M. C. HUNGERFORD.

A DELICIOUS SUMMER DESSERT.—A PRETTY TABLE SCARF.—HOUSEHOLD WASTE AND POT AU FEU.—TAKING STAINS FROM UPHOLSTERY FABRICS.—CLEANING GLOVES.—PRETTY COTTON DRESSES FOR PRETTY WOMEN, OR PLAIN WOMEN.

A delicious summer dessert that is really "fit for the king," is made by heating a pint of currants and raspberries, mixed till the juice runs freely. Squeeze out all the juice, add twice the quantity of water, a cup of sugar, and a pinch of salt. Put it over the fire and just before it boils thicken with corn starch to the consistency of blanc mange. Let it boil three minutes, pour into a buttered mould, and eat cold with cream, or milk, if the former is not procurable.

A pretty table scarf is made of a strip of Java canvas, of the length desired, lengthwise through the centre put two strips of black velvet ribbon, an inch or more wide, leaving a space between them as broad as both strips of ribbon. Fill this space with polka dots worked in all shades of silk, and placed at irregular distances. The effect is quite unique and pretty, and affords a good way of utilizing odds and ends of embroidery silk. If the silk falls short, intersperse occasional dots, worked with crewel. A good deal of black may be advantageously used in making the dots, which should be about the size of the top of an ordinary wooden lead pencil.

It is computed that there is household waste enough in the United States in one week to support the entire population two weeks. In contrast to this be it known, that in France, the refuse of an ordinary family will not support a dog or other domestic animal. Surely we are in the wrong and housekeepers should give strict attention to the wicked extravagance that goes on in their kitchens. As one method of reform let each kitchen have its pot au feu or "waste kettle," as English country people some times call it. That is; a soup pot into which goes every eatable thing which would otherwise be thrown away. No soups are equal to those of the French, and yet this soup kettle is the foundation of them all.

Put into it, says their great chef, Soyer, "the crumbs dropped in cutting the bread, the unsightly outside leaves of lettuce and cabbage, the stems and leaves of the radishes, and the water in which vegetables have been boiled, the bones trimmed from meat to roast, the gristle and other bits, however small, cut from cold meat in preparing it to chop for croquettes or mince, the wing tips and cleaned feet of poultry, and every other available thing from animal or vegetable food." Boil the pot a large part of every day, adding water as required and every other day strain the liquor. A knuckle of veal or a shin bone of beef should be put in once a week, and in either case the bones must be broken into small bits. The grease from the pot au feu being skimmed off daily and clarified in clear water, furnishes all the grease needed for frying.

It has lately been said in a scientific paper, that faded or stained upholstery fabrics, such as raw silk, tapestries, brocades and silk plushes, can be rebrightened by the application of chloroform with a sponge. It is only the aniline colors that can be thus renewed, but that seems at present to be the basis of nearly all dyes. The cheapest grade of chloroform is equal to the best for the cleansing purpose.

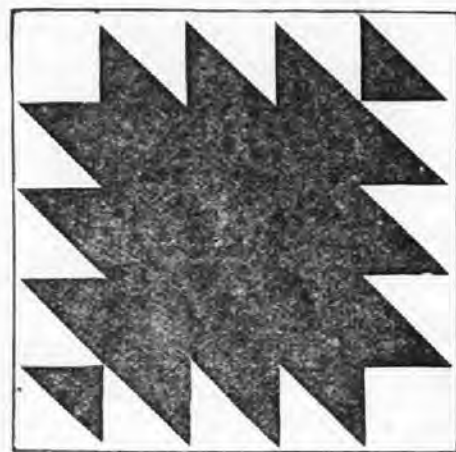

Gloves may be perfectly cleaned by the lavish use of benzine. To begin with, buy at a paint shop, one pint of benzine and divide it into three portions; wash the gloves in one, rubbing them very hard, then wash them in fresh benzine, and rinse in the third portion, and rub them dry with a clean soft cloth. After the gloves are dry, iron them under linen or paper, with a moderately warm iron to replace the worn off shine. Pour all the benzine into a jar and cover it closely; set it away till the next day, when the dirt will be found settled on the bottom; pour off the clean fluid, and bottle it to use again for glove cleaning.

Since the Princess of Wales has given dignity to cotton dresses, by wearing them on many occasions instead of richer toilets, they have become very much the fashion on our side of the Atlantic. Velvet and plush trimmings, in the form of collars, revers, etc., are added to simple gingham and sateens; but, of course, such adjuncts have to be removed, when the dresses are washed. A dress worn last week by a Saratoga belle, was made of red and gray broad striped gingham, with basque of plain red. The skirt had a long plaited panel at each side held down by straps of red velvet. A band of velvet was on a narrow plaited ruffle at the foot of the skirt. The drapery fell in soft, loose folds in the front and back, and the basque had high collar, cuffs and narrow vest of velvet. Such a dress gives style to a pretty woman, and adds to the attractions of a beauty.

CUPBOARDS.

The cupboards should line the kitchen walls between windows and doors; some should be full length, one should contain mop, brooms, brushes, cloths for cleaning and dusting; one of these cloths should be used with kerosene which might well be termed the poor man's varnish. The oiled cupboards, doors and floor should be lightly wiped with a kerosened cloth once a week, the result is wonderful and the disagreeable fragrance is soon dissipated with an open window.

Upon one side the cupboards should cease at a convenient height, to have their top make an ever ready workshelf for the reception of prepared vegetables and all dinner preparations. At one end of this shelf let a broad, smooth board rest, ready to receive the deposit of any hot dish or kettle as it is taken from the stove. When the dinner dishes are washed each day, take a bit of sal-soda and wash this board off, then it will never become a "dirty thing."

Mrs. Reed—It is a recreation to me to piece bed-quilts, and so I have brought to-day a pattern that is very easy to both cut and join. The body of the centre square is nine inches across, the corner blocks are three inches square and the half of these, that constitute the saw teeth, are half a square and a trifle over, or a seam longer to avoid drawing in at the seams. Two colors are prettiest for this pattern, as red or green for the centres of the blocks, and the corners filled in with white, but other colors may be more convenient.

KITCHEN.

PICKLED ONIONS.

Mrs. Ewing—Can any one tell me how to pickle onions? Is it necessary to cook them?

Mrs. Everts—They are so much better when cooked until tender that I can hardly bear the tough, hard pickles that we sometimes buy. Select the small silver-skinned ones, those the size of marbles are best. Skin them carefully, and cook them in equal parts of milk and water until they begin to look clear, then add salt as if preparing them for the table. Drain well before putting them into bottles. A good way is to spread them out on dry towels or cloths and wipe them. Then pour over them hot vinegar in which has been scalded, white mustard, horseradish and whole cloves and peppercorns. After a few days pour off the vinegar and scald it again; cork well and seal.

RICE MERINGUE.

Mrs. Raikes—There are many new puddings in these days, made from cerealine, maniocca, etc., but none are more desirable in my estimation than a rice pudding made thus: Boil a small teacupful of rice in a double boiler, until soft. When cool mix with it three pints sweet milk, the yolks of three well beaten eggs, one-half teacupful white sugar, a little nutmeg or vanilla, and salt. Mix well, pour into a pudding dish, and bake. When done beat the whites of the eggs to a froth, add three table-spoonfuls sugar, and one-half teaspoonful lemon extract. Spread this meringue over the pudding, return to the oven and bake a light brown.

GRAHAM BREAD.

Mrs. L. H. W., Sharon, Mass., says: Most delicious graham bread can be made after the following recipe. Have used it five years and it never failed me. Take a pint of milk, and the same amount of warm water, add 2 large tablespoonfuls melted butter, 4 of molasses, salt to taste, and a pinch of soda. Make this stiff enough to mould on the board, by using half graham and half wheat flour. Let it rise twice, moulding it on the board each time. Always have a pan of biscuit from this and the remainder in bread. For biscuits roll out with the rolling pin, cut with a small cutter, dip side of each in melted butter, so they will separate after baking.

ARTISTIC AMUSEMENTS.

QUEEN SHELL WORK.

Now make a similar bag to the one described in the hanging watch pocket, and glue it in the pair of shells. Glue three shells on the stand, edge it with chenille, and the watch pocket is made. Fig. 13 represents it.

FIG. 13.

The second method is a combination of pin-cushion watch pocket, and ring holder, and is more complicated, though not very difficult to make. First construct a stand of wood, similar to the above, only with places for four shells instead of three, and in the square hole in its centre glue an upright piece of wood, cut to the shape shown in Fig. 14.

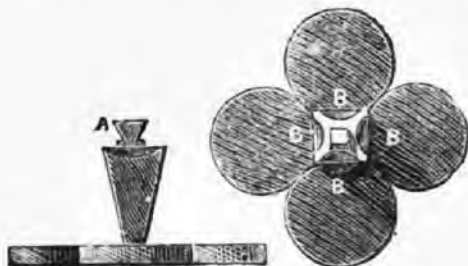

FIG. 14.

It must be about one-half inch square at the bottom to fit in the hole in the stand, but gradually becoming thicker until at a height of about three inches from the stand it is one inch and a half square. Now cut the wood away until there is only a piece in the centre half an inch square; carry this up about three quarters of an inch higher, cut it off square, and cut niches near the bottom on opposite sides, as shown in A, Fig. 15. Next hollow out four half circular places in the top of the wide part of the upright, as shown at B B, Fig. 14. These must be scooped out enough to allow the rounded bottom parts of four small shells to fit into them, as shown in Fig. 15, which is supposed to be a section through the centre of the top part of the wooden upright with two of the shells in their place. It is drawn on a larger scale in order to show more distinctly what is intended.

Having thus prepared the upright, select a large pair of shells, and drill two holes in the top and two in the hinge end of each; also drill two holes about half an inch from the bottom or small end of the upright, to correspond with the holes in the hinge end of the shells, and two at the top corresponding with the upper holes, thread fine wire through the lower holes, and fix the hinge end of the shells tightly to the upright with it, fasten the top of the shells in a similar manner, only using colored ribbon instead of wire, as this fastening will show, and tie it in a bow in front. Now make two stout bags, stuffed with bran, to fit in between the projecting sides of the shells, and the upright one for each side, and cover the part of each bag that shows between the edges of the shells with velvet; glue them into the shells, and to the upright, and you have the pincushions made.

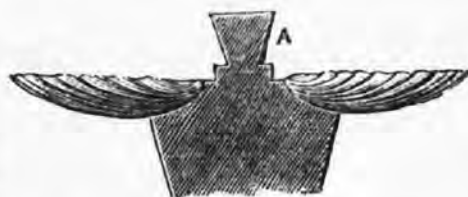

FIG. 15.

Next select four small shells of any equal size for the ring holders, and make a hole in the bottom of each large enough to admit a small screw, now cut four circular pieces of tin, about 1/4 in. in diameter, with holes in the centres the same size as those made in the shells, and having covered the four recesses in the top of the upright with glue, fix the bottom ends of the shells in them, placing the shells inside upwards. Now lay the pieces of tin in the shells, fitting the holes accurately, and with four small screws put through the pieces of tin and holes in shells, fix the shells tightly to the wood. The pieces of tin (or washers) are to prevent the screws from breaking the shells when they are tightened up. Take care to fix the shells perfectly level, and at right angles to the upright, line them with velvet, glued in, and the ring holders are complete. Fig. 16 is a plan on same scale as Fig. 15, showing the mode of fixing the ring holders.

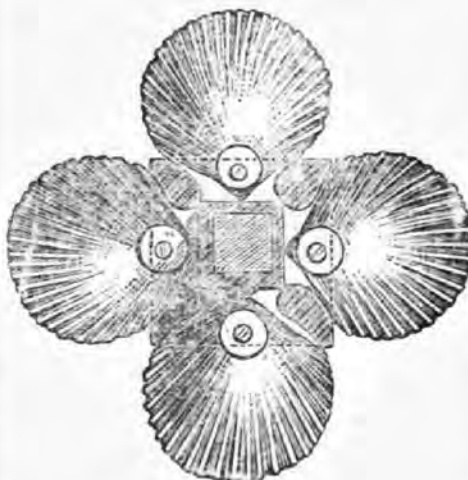

FIG. 16.

The watch pocket is made in a similar manner to the last described, by a pocket glued in a pair of shells, which must be fixed with wire in the niches of the half inch piece of the upright above the pinholder (see A, Figs. 14 and 15.) Now glue the four shells for the stand on it, and put chenille round wherever the wood work shows, and the watch pocket is complete.

Great care should be taken to select four shells of exactly the same size from the ring holders, and also for the stand, but the shells for the former should be considerably smaller than those selected for the latter.

These useful and ornamental little shell work knickknacks would be certain to "take" at bazaars.

BROGS hired a lively horse the other day to take a little exercise. He got more exercise than he wanted; and as he limped to the side of the road to rest himself, a friend asked him: "What did you come down so quick for?" -- "What did I come down so quick for? Did you see anything up in the air for me to hold on to?" he asked, grimly.

Two Scotch students, desirous to make themselves comfortable, had a stove put in their chamber; one bought the stove and the other paid the mason to have a hole cut in the chimney. They broke up housekeeping the other day, and divided the effects. One had the stove and the other the hole.

PHILATELY.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

This island has been in the possession of Great Britain for more than a century, and became a part of the Dominion of Canada in 1873.

Perhaps no other British colony has poorer executed stamps; yet the designs are pleasing and tasty. The catalogues fix the date of the first issue at 1860, but it is not at all improbable that the first issue occurred at a somewhat earlier date. The first issue consisted of six values: one penny, buff; two penny, rose; three penny, blue; four penny, black; six penny, green; and nine penny, lilac. The design of each stamp was different, and as follows:

One penny: head of Queen Victoria to left in twisted frame, "Prince Edward Island" above and at sides, "One Penny" below; large perforation. Two pence: head of Queen to left in double-lined circle, with the inscription, "Prince Edward Island Postage;" "Two Pence" at bottom in straight band; small perforation. Three pence: head to left in a double-lined oval, with the inscription same as two pence; "Three pence" in straight band below; small perforations. Four pence: head of Queen to left in a rectangular frame on horizontal lined ground, "Prince Edward Island" in waving band above; "Postage" immediately below inscription; "Four Pence" on waving band below; large perforation. The date of issue of this value is much disputed, but 1869 seems to be the probable date. Six pence: head as in other values, in double-lined octagon; "Prince Edward Island" above and at sides; "Postage" below; "Six Pence" in straight label at bottom; large perforation. Nine pence: head to left in twisted frame with inscription, "Prince Edward Island Postage;" ornaments in upper corners; "Nine Pence Currency Equal to Six Pence Sterling," in a straight label below.

A ten-pence stamp was invented and catalogued by a well-known and enterprising Paris dealer. So cleverly was the forgery executed, and so shrewdly put on the market, that experienced collectors and old dealers were all deceived, and for some months it passed as genuine, and found its way into many collections.

On account of a change in the currency a new stamp was prepared in 1864, value four and a half pence. Design as follows: Full face of the Queen to left in oval, surrounded by band bearing the inscription, "Prince Edward Island Postage;" "3d stg." in lower right corner; and "4 1/2d. cy." in lower left corner; ornamental work in upper angles; large perforation; color, brown.

At the adoption of the decimal currency it was, of course, found necessary to issue a new set of stamps; and accordingly, in 1872, a new set consisting of six values made its appearance. The designs, as in the preceding issue, were different and as follows:

One cent: head of Queen to left in lined circle, surrounded by the inscription, "Prince Edward Island Postage;" "One Cent" in straight band below; numerals in corners; color, orange.

Two cents: head to left in oval surrounded by an arch bearing the inscription; numerals in corners; "Two Cents" below in straight band; color, blue.

Four cents: head to left in octagon; numerals in square in corners; "Postage Prince Edward Island" above in oblong frame; "Four Cents" at bottom; color, green.

Six cents: head in rectangular ornamental frame; letters in corners; "Postage" above in straight band, beneath which, in another straight frame, "Prince Edward Island" appears; color, black.

Twelve cents: head to left in circle; numerals in upper corners; "Prince Edward Island" in arch; "Twelve Cents" below; color, lilac.

All of these stamps were manufactured in London by Charles Whitney. Numerous counterfeits exist, chiefly of the four pence, and as usual are lithographed instead of engraved. They all are comparatively common, and can easily be obtained. When, in 1873, this colony became a part of Canada, the Canadian stamps were substituted.

A WOMAN'S ORS.

"Men work from morn till set of sun." They do.
"But a woman's work is never done." Quite true.

For when one task she's finished, something's found

Awaiting a beginning, all year round.

Whether it be
To draw the tea,
Or bake the bread,
Or make the bed,
Or ply the broom,
Or dust the room,
Or floor to scrub,
Or knives to rub,
Or table set,
Or meals to get,
Or shelves to scan,
Or fruit to can,
Or seeds to sow,
Or plants to grow,
Or linens bleach,
Or lessons teach,
Or butter churn,
Or jackets turn,
Or polish glass,
Or plate or brass,
Or clothes to mend,
Or children tend,
Or notes indite,
Or stories write—

But I must stop, for really if I should
Name all the ors, take me a day it would.
So many are there that I do declare
More boats than I could count might have a pair;
And yet enough be left; and, men-folks, these Same ors propel your barks o'er household seas,
Into sunny havens where you rest at ease.
And, one word more, don't you forget it, please

CHAPTER I.

HOW WE CROSSED THE GULF STREAM.

On the morning of January 1st, 1884, we were seated on the deck of a little schooner of some seventy tons measurement awaiting with some impatience for the time to come when we should cast off our moorings and sail for Nassau. The hour set for leaving was eight o'clock, but the sun had reached the meridian before all of our tardy passengers, booked for the voyage, had put in an appearance.

The captain, who had repeatedly gone ashore, ostensibly to look up passengers, especially one whom he called "the Chinaman," was, as far as we could judge, most decidedly the worst for the liquor which he had apparently considered it necessary for him to imbibe, to assist him in the search of said Chinaman. Thus it happened that our most worthy skipper, when we came to cast loose from the shore, saw two schooners lying at anchor ahead of us, when we, our eyes being in a nominal condition, saw but one, and in trying to steer between these vessels, our captain was in danger of running down the only ship in the way. Noting our peril, one of the crew rushed aft, and attempted to take the wheel from the hands of the skipper. But this procedure only made matters worse, for such a flagrant act of insubordination, so infuriated the intoxicated captain, that he began a fierce struggle with his assailant, abandoning the wheel altogether, that he might use both hands, at the same time stamping and shouting.

"I will be captain of my own ship. Be you men, draw that jib, lower that foresail; if I am so drunk that I can't stand, I'll steer the ship."

Meanwhile, had it not been for the coolness of one of the passengers, who promptly seized the wheel, giving it a few rapid turns, thus causing us to pass to the leeward of the vessel, our voyage might have terminated quickly and disastrously. A few more moments of excitement, during which we luffed up slightly, to avoid a boat under our lee, and we were fairly under way.

During this time, however, the confusion was augmented by the eccentric proceedings of a stalwart negro passenger, a native of Nassau, who, like many of his countrymen, had been for some months past searching for the almighty dollar, in the land of the free. This man had followed the example of our captain, in assisting in looking up the Chinaman, and his potations appeared to have a similar effect upon him, for he seemed imbued with the idea that he was gifted with some protective power, for leaping to the top of the rail, he steadied himself, by clinging to a convenient rope, drew himself up in as majestic a manner as he could assume, exclaimed at the top of his voice, but in a grandeloquent tone, "It is I, be not afraid," reiterating this remark every time the captain uttered an angry expression.

Clear of the harbor at last, seaward we glided, passing the brick fort which is supposed to guard the city of Key West, only to meet a head wind off the eastern shore of the island, but our vessel drew up to the wind bravely, and on we dashed through the white water, nearly down to the revolving screw-pile light, that is built on a coral reef south-east of the Key, on which reef many a gallant ship has left her bones.

"Hard a-lee," shouts our skipper, whom the ocean air had sobered wonderfully, and away we go through the rising swell on the gaining tack, passing Key West, and obtaining a fine view of the island, with its one fort, and its two so-called towers, also brick structures, intended as defensive in the days before the invention of ton-weight balls, hurled by monitor-carried guns, but now regarded merely as monuments of the past. Still on we dash, until the water shoals once more, and another tack eastward carries us quite out of the comparatively white waters into the beautiful blue of the Gulf Stream. So on we go, just touching the pea-green waters of the shoals at every inward tack, the blue sky overhead, dancing, sparkling waves around, a steady breeze, and enough of it; but, above all, we are in the six-knot current of the northward flowing stream, which helps us on our journey wonderfully. Thus we sail merrily over the deep blue, foam-capped waves. Then, gradually, as the sun dropped below the western horizon, behind the distant Florida Keys, the brilliant coloring of the water grew more sombre in hue, the far-away shores disappeared in the gathering darkness, and night settled down over the restless waters of the Gulf Stream.

Next morning when we came on deck we found the scene utterly changed. We had crossed the stream, and during the night had come onto soundings, and were then bowling along over the comparatively shallow waters of the Bahama Banks. The hue of the sea was of a very light green, "White water" our captain, who was now quite a different man from the semi-intoxicated person of the day before, called it.

All day we sailed smoothly onward, the low, level shore of Andros Island lying to the eastward, but invisible. The only instance that varied the monotony of the scene, was the appearance of a coullan, or crying bird, common in Florida, which was evidently crossing from Andros to the main. This bird, probable mistaking the vessel for a little Key, attempted to alight on the stern, and as I happened to be standing there at the moment, came within five feet of my head, but some other passengers perceiving such a large bird, evidently about to alight, rushed toward it, frightening it away, and it continued on its westward course. Had I succeeded in capturing it, I should have added a new species to the list of Bahaman birds, even before I had seen the Islands, for being on the Banks, everything taken would have belonged to the Bahaman fauna. Our captain informed me that he had taken two coullans, one the trips out; these he had placed in a hen coop, and taken to Key West, where he had sold them.

Once again the sun neared the horizon, and as the red orb settled into the pale water, leaving a crimson track across the waves, the wind died away and soon we were lying idly upon the glassy surface, the sails flapping against the masts, as the vessel rolled gently upon the slight swell. A mist had settled upon the face of the deep, and out of the dusky distance, came strange, weird sounds, possibly cries of sea birds or of marine animals; but exaggerated by the silence which seems doubly profound at sea, it did not require a very vivid imagination to convert them into the ghostly voices of long-drowned sailors.

We passengers were all gathered around the captain, who, like many native Bahamans, was a gifted story-teller, and who had been enlightening us with graphic descriptions of the scenery, manner and customs of the inhabitants, etc., of the Islands towards which we were bound. Impressed perhaps by the weirdness of the surroundings, some one said: "Captain, haven't you a Flying Dutchman, or some other ghostly, sea-going apparition of a similar character, in these parts?"—"Heaven forbid," exclaimed the captain, who, like nearly all of his countrymen, was a firm believer in the supernatural. "I never want to see the Flying Dutchman, or any other like ship," then after a pause continued: "But I will tell you of something that happened to my grandsire, in these very parts, perhaps in this very spot, for it is fresh in my mind, as I have been thinking about it, ever since this mist settled down over the water."

The captain, who was a tall, thin man, with a dark, weather-beaten face, upon which I never saw a smile appear, was seated upon the keel of an upturned boat, one hand instinctively grasping a rope, and the other he used to gesticulate with as he reached the more interesting portion of his tale. A half-dozen of us passengers were gathered around him, seated on camp stools, or reclining on coils of rope, eagerly listening for the story. Meanwhile, the brilliant, cone-like illumination, known as the zodiacal light, which often succeeds departed day in these waters, had gone from the western sky, the mist had settled down more thickly, while the silence was most profound, broken only by the bubbling, half-articulated sounds, which came from the distance, and which one could scarcely hear, without a shudder, so weird and ghost-like did they seem. The captain rose to his feet, took a hitch in his trousers, glanced completely around the horizon, sat coolly down again, looked at his audience, cleared his throat, and began.

CUSTOMER: "Do you call that a veal cutlet, waiter? Why, it's an insult to every true calf in the country."—Waiter: "I didn't mean to insult you, sir."

"MOTHER, this book tells about the 'angry waves of the ocean.' Now, what makes the ocean get angry?"—"Because it has been crossed so often, my son."

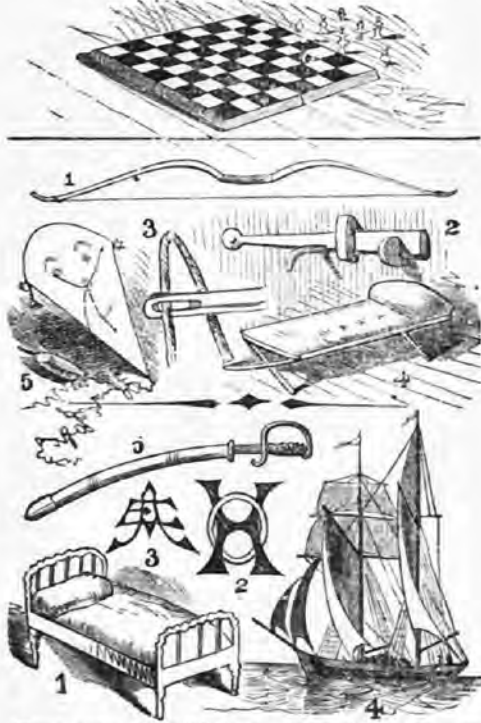

A GIRL out West ate arsenic to improve her complexion, and now it is the universal opinion of all the young men that she looks like an angel.

NEW PUZZLES.

No. 1. CURTAILMENT.
A question here I would inquire
To those who are in knowledge sound,
And he who first the answer sends
Will be esteemed my best of friends.

Of toilet soap: I would inquire
How all are sold? Now boys aspire
To solve this "con." We know, each one
How hay is sold — 'tis by the ton —
Or sugar — by the dollar's worth;

Or tea that's brought across the earth;
Or powder — by the pound — or ice,
That makes buck-beer so cool and nice;
Or shoes, that by the pair we buy;
Or hogs! that wallow in one sty.
But stop — 'tis toilet soap I here
Inquire about — how sold — and fear
It may not seem self-evident
To such as with a good intent
Prime answer seek. So I'll declare
(Which posers should not deem unfair),
That by the scent's worth it is sold
(Like chewing gum to folks — not old).

 COLA, S. C.

MR. EDITOR:
 Dear Sir,—Have been receiving your valuable little paper, and can say it is one of the best mediums of its kind now extant. Freely recommend it too all who desire a good paper of exchanges. Box 306. ALLY JOHN DENT.
 BOSTON.

Dear Sir,—I am pleased to say that my list of exchanges (consisting of type writers, coins, currency, pistols, full rigged ship, etc.) were all satisfactorily disposed of through the medium of your paper. I had advertised the same "exchanges" in daily papers of large circulation but received no replies. Your paper brought me nearly one hundred offers, and I consider it the best means of exchanging surplus articles to be had in the United States, simply because it is devoted to "exchanges" and other newspapers are not. I send a few more "exchanges," and trust for similar successes.
 Yours truly,
 E. L. M.
 Box 2436, P. O.

 PERCIVAL GASSETT, Esq. Boston, Mass.
 Dear Sir,—Please discontinue my notice of Rubber Stamp Outfit, and insert inclosed Exchange. I had no trouble in disposing of Outfit, as I received fully one hundred applications for it, and I wish to state to those who have, and may yet write me, that I forward name and address to the best Rubber Stamp Manufacturing Co. in the United States. I find by the letters I receive that THE EXCHANGE AND MART visits every part of our country. I assure you its visits in this vicinity are highly welcomed. Wishing you abundant success, I am yours respectfully,
 FRANK M. LYON,
 Van Buren Co., Box 33. Pierceville Iowa.

PHILADELPHIA.
 EDITOR OF EXCHANGE AND MART:
 Please discontinue my ad. in regard to lathe, as it has been sold several weeks ago, and I am constantly receiving answers to the ad.
