But two countries ever issued a stamp bearing a grille -- Peru and United States.

The first American dealer was located in New York City, and was said to have a uniform price of five cents each.

"THE CONNELL STAMP"

Some stamps are doubly interesting not only because of their peculiar color, shape or design, but on account of anecdotes that have figured in their existence. First and foremost among these is the "CONNELL STAMP" of New Brunswick.

Connell was the name of a man who was Post Master General of the colony; he designed a set of stamp, with the purpose of have some prominent member of the royal family on each one.

He placed Queen Victoria and her son on the ten and seventeen cent values respectively, and as he evidently thought the other members were not prominent enough, he placed his own portrait on the five cent value. This created quite a sensation and was strenuously objected to in England, and as a result it was rejected. It is now a very favorite stamp.

The largest packet ever made up for sale is one numbering 13528 varieties. The price for this large packet was $350.00

Stamps are valued by their scarcity not by th length of time that it has been circulated.
